Still More Hauptmann
Nobody to Fight Him
Watch the Diesel
Happy, and Do Not Know It

Young gentlemen reporters, old gentlemen editors, are inventing new Hauptmann theories, including the theory that he had an accomplice, but no, not to save his life, not to win Heaven itself would he reveal the name of that accomplice.

An imaginative Hauptmann lawyer thinks 1,000,000 Americans will contribute to a fund to fight for Hauptmann's release. Some think the number would be fewer than 1,000,000. Hauptmann was moved to a death cell in Trenton state prison, today. No secrecy was necessary, for as Al Capone said, "The man who committed that kidnaping belongs to no regular mob." With no regular mob, there is nobody to interfere with your death cell trip.

Pennsylvania would make "death mandatory" for kidnaping, with extortion. If they don't "seek to extort money or other valuables, it isn't death," which seems to attach excessive importance to "money or other valuables."

The New York Evening Journal quotes Mr. Hauptmann's wife, begging him to confess if he is guilty, asking, "Did you do it? Were you there?" To which Hauptmann replies, "Anna, if the electric chair stood where you are now I would have nothing to tell. I have told the truth."

To a reporter, Hauptmann said, "I am more religious than most people." He denied indignantly any tinge of atheism.

That is interesting, because barring the unexpected, Hauptmann will soon know what foundation exists, if any, for atheistic belief.

Washington reports that senators tread softly in the neighborhood of Huey Long. They walk around him, as it were, on their tip-toes, seeking no trouble with that gentleman, whose motto is "Every man a King, and I the Kingfish"

Senator Long says he wants an investigation of all government building operations in New York in which Postmaster-General James A. Farley had any interest. The Senate answers, "Yes, indeed, certainly, by all means, Mr. Long, is there anything else you would like?" It takes two to make a fight, Huey Long is only one.

Dave Evans, racing driver, drove a Diesel automobile faster than one hundred and twenty-five miles an hour at Daytona, Fla., yesterday. Airplanes with Diesel engines will take passengers from the Atlantic to the Pacific between breakfast and supper for less than ten dollars apiece soon. Write that down.

James A. Moffett, federal housing administrator, says the country is out of the depression but does not know it. In the West he "found business conditions definitely improved. Los Angeles alone has pledged one hundred million dollars in new construction and modernization, involving all types of buildings." San Francisco likewise has embarked on an ambitious building program.

Now if ten or twelve million idle Americans can get back to jobs, even though they may "not know it," all will be well.

An unusual man is Vincent Deleo, 20 years old, sitting in the death house of Sing Sing prison, soon to die, telling jailers, "I want no reprieve." He refuses to take the half-hour exercise allowed to death house prisoners, says, "I do not want any visitors. I do not want to write anything to anybody. I want no effort to keep me from the electric chair."

Deleo, who killed one of the keepers in Clinton prison, recalls grotesquely an old song: "Here's to the man who's content with his lot, who never goes sighing for what he has not."

This would be a dangerous world if more men were as indifferent to death as this man seems to be. The safety of the many is in the instinct of self-preservation in the individual. Remove fear of death, and who would be safe?

Strikes are still important in the news. Organized labor believes that the government is back of it, and considers the "employer always wrong, and the employe always right." It was once thought that employers provide jobs. That is archaic theory, now.

FORM Teachers' POST

LEGION HITS SCHOOL REDS

The formation of a Teachers' Post of the American Legion in Boston, to combat the spread of Communism at its source, today won the unqualified support of Frank N. Belgrano, Jr., national commander of the Legion.

"That is a message that will be given to the entire nation," he said at the breakfast tendered him at the Hotel Westminster by Mayor Mansfield by way of a prelude to the big "get-together" at the Copley-Plaza tonight.

Following his recommendation, the executive committee of the Massachusetts Department of the Legion by a vote of 20 to 1 approved a charter for the School Teachers' Post.

It is expected that more than 1500 New England Legionnaires will hear Belgrano map the organization's campaign against Reds and other subversive influences at that time.

"I am particularly pleased," Belgrano said, "with the work Massachusetts is doing to further the Legion's principles of Americanism."

LEONARD Called in Dope PROBE

U. S. JURY AFTER RACKET KING

Dope revelations that followed the Cosmos Club slaying of Joseph P. "Red" Sweeney brought a summons for Police Commissioner Joseph J. Leonard from the federal grand jury today.

Developments threatened, too, to topple the reign of Boston's overlord of dope, rum and rackets as federal agents stepped in for a cleanup.

The death of Sweeney eight days ago, the holding of two customs guards as hostages for the release of a prisoner, and the dope, rum and gambling racket in Boston focused attention on suave Bostonian who has ruled with an iron hand—until now.

North End Center

The grand jury is particularly interested in a $50,000 dope raid in the North End last November—and in the power behind the building where the dope was concealed.

A high federal official, who would not be quoted, charged that Sweeney and other habitues of Boston night clubs received supplies of narcotics from the raided North End headquarters.

Deputy United States Marshal Charles Kenney was dispatched to police headquarters to serve the summons for Commissioner Leonard and his records.

As a result of the experience of the customs guards who were held as hostages on the Fish Pier in the darkness of Wednesday morning, federal agents are convinced that the rum and narcotic smuggling ring is desperate.

They have announced that $50,000 rewards await persons who can offer useful assistance. A dozen or more have been questioned.

Joseph A. Maynard, collector of customs, declared that the names of many in the ring are known. He said arrests will be made when ironclad cases are built up by his investigators.

Monday, United States Attorney Francis J. W. Ford will have sufficient evidence to present against real leaders of the gang to the federal jury, Collector Maynard promised.

2 Guard Fliers Crash To River Ice

Nashua, N. H., Feb. 16—Two Boston National Guard fliers crashed today on the ice of the Merrimack river here, in the course of a flood survey trip.

Sergeant Joseph L. McNeil suffered a gash in his forehead. He was taken to the office of a Nashua doctor.

The undercarriage of the plane hit a power line, forcing a landing on the ice. Trucks were sent from Boston and Concord to salvage the wrecked plane.

CURLEY AIDS WIN PEEK AT POLICE FILES

Police Commissioner Joseph J. Leonard today refused to permit Attorneys John P. Feeney and Francis R. Mullin, representing Governor Curley, to quiz members of the bureau of records at police headquarters.

Permission was given the governor's representatives, however, to peruse the records.

Former District-Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien, representing Leonard denied Feeney and Mullin the chance to interrogate subordinates on the grounds that "conduct of the department by Commissioner Leonard is an issue which should be tried before the governor's council and not at police headquarters."

Governor Curley, asked the nature of the visit made to police headquarters by Attorneys Feeney and F. R. Mullin, said:

"They went there to look over finger prints records and complaint books."

The governor added that there were so many complaints on the books about places to be raided, that when the "incorruptibles" squad was named by the police commissioner all they had to do was to jot down the first 75 complaints.

"They made more raids in two days than were made in 2½ years," said the governor.

The governor said that the raids resulted from the public reaction to the Cosmos Club murder.

Hauptmann Today

"Bruno will confess within two weeks," promises Keeper Selby of Trenton prison.

United States Senators, all former governors, say: "Let Bruno die."

By KENNETH T. DOWNS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 16—Bruno Richard Hauptmann arrived at the New Jersey State prison, where he must pay with his life for the murder of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., at 10:31 a. m. today.

Pale and haggard, Hauptmann was brought here from Flemington, 23 miles away, convoyed by the largest guard ever accorded a single prisoner in this state.

The winding road over which he was transported passed within two miles of the former Sourland mountains home of Colonel Lindbergh, where "the crime of the century" was committed on the night of March 1, 1932.

"I am innocent, absolutely innocent," Hauptmann cried, as he was taken from his automobile in front of the stone prison.

The crowd roared. There were derisive cries, but some shouted:

"You're right, Bruno. We are with you."

A battery of newsreel cameras ground away from the tops of sound trucks and other points in front of the entrance as blue-uniformed state troopers tumbled out of their automobiles and formed a phalanx around the slender prisoner.

Photographers' flash bulbs popped from every vantage point. Bright sunshine bathed the scene, glinting on the handcuffs which secured Hauptmann's wrists to those of two guards.

"Do you want to confess now, Bruno?"

"Get this into your head, I am innocent. Absolutely innocent."

"If I had anything to confess, I would have confessed it a long time ago."

He was then rushed up a flight of stone steps and was swallowed up within the century old prison.

He was taken immediately to the office of Irving Bleam, gray-haired clerk, to be registered and assigned his number—17,400.

Bleam, a great criminal psychologist, who has drawn confessions from many condemned prisoners, will make the sphinx-like Hauptmann

Death Threat to Trenchard and Governor

By Associated Press

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 16—Governor Harold G. Hoffman revealed a letter today which threatened him, Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard and the Hauptmann jury with the "Death of Revenge" if Bruno Richard Hauptmann's sentence to death in the electric chair is not commuted to life imprisonment by Feb. 27.

The governor made no comment in making public the letter, but said he would turn it over to the Department of Justice.

Written in a long scrawl, it was received in an envelope with a Washington, D. C., postmark showing it had been mailed from the capital at 8 p. m. February 15.

The letter was addressed to "Governor of New Jersey, Trenton, N. J., with the address on the envelope in printed form.

The letter follows:

"January 14, 1934
(Skull and Crossbones.)
"Dear Governor of New Jersey
Judge Trenchard and Jury:

"I want to have this mark (an arrow pointed to the skull and crossbones at the top of the page) removed from Hauptmann and at least give him life sentence till the kidnaper is found.

"If not so may you all meet the death of revenge, and even all the army or the state militia can protect you. If you do not make the move mentioned by February 27, it will be bad. Get us. Yours truly,

"X-26

In a postscript, the writer charged the whole case was a "frameup" and that the "state cannot even prove Richard Brono Hauptman guilty."

'Bruno Will Talk,' Vows Jailer

SEES 'CONFESSION' IN TWO WEEKS

Will Use 'Kindness'

By International News Service.

Trenton, Feb. 16—"Within two weeks after he gets here Bruno Hauptmann will have confessed."

"Comradely kindness" is to be the weapon with which he expects to soften this man of granite so he will talk. Selby explained:

"He just hasn't been in the right environment and hasn't been handled right. He'll talk here all right. There's no doubt about it.

"We've had a lot harder bunch of men come here and talk before they took that last trip. We've been able to save many of them from the chair because they did talk."

Plan All Mapped

Selby has already planned his "confession campaign" step-by-step. He knows his deathhouse and the men who come there to live only leave in death. Selby said:

"The first day Bruno is settled, I will visit him and talk about our army lives. We both were in the army and thus have something in common.

"I'll tell him I always had the highest respect for the capabilities of the German army. I won't try to reach inside of him that first day or even that first week.

"I am merely going to prepare the way for a man I have in mind, who can make anyone he has ever met break and talk.

"I won't give you his name because he wouldn't want that.

"But Hauptmann won't be the first hard-boiled killer he made talk.

"It will be my part to lay the groundwork, soften him up for his meeting with the other man. Here he'll meet someone who'll just ease his way into Hauptmann's mind—his soul.

"He'll Soften Up"

"This may sound very ridiculous and impossible to you, since so many big-shot policemen have failed to make him talk. But he'll talk here.

"The environment—being tossed in this compact death-house with men who are also about to die—will soften him up. It seems to make them all penitent sooner or later.

"After I think he is vulnerable, I'll let him meet this man I've been telling you about. He isn't a scientific psychologist, but he knows human beings a lot better.

"A few days after he starts his campaign with Hauptmann we'll have a full confession.

"Until now, everyone has been pretty hard-boiled with Hauptmann. The trial was a carnival at its brightest. Here there is no fanfare.

"He'll be just Number 17,400 and one of the poor unfortunates who is slated to go out through that door.

"Throughout the arrest and the trial he kept thinking that talking wouldn't do any good—that he still had a chance.

BRUNO TRIAL Principals Scatter

Flemington Goes Back to Former Calm

By DAMON RUNYON
Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service.

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 16—For over a month we have had here in this pleasant little town a reproduction of an old-fashioned western mining camp, rising to its peak of excitement the last few days.

As you read these lines it has all spluttered out and Flemington has settled back into the former peace and tranquillity that characterizes the average small Jersey town, but it will have the memory of a sudden surge of life, and pace, that it is not likely to forget quickly.

This writer has been on the battlefront of many a big news event, of all descriptions, but he has never seen anything like the Flemington of January and February, 1935.

Students Present

The room where the operators and the newspaper writers try to work, on the ground floor of the Union Hotel, just between the two bars, is jammed with visitors.

Such was Flemington the last two days and nights of the trial.

Over 4,000,000 words have gone out of Flemington on the telegraph wires to the newspapers of this country.

It is something that the cub reporters working on the trial, who talk about when they are old men mann "talk," prison officials boast.

Hleam assigned Hauptmann to cell Number Nine in the death house. The cell is less than six paces from the tiny execution chamber where Hauptmann is scheduled to die in the electric chair during the week of March 18.

After being registered and stripped of his belongings, Hauptmann was taken to a room farther inside the prison to be stripped and bathed and given one of the gray-ish-black uniforms worn by prisoners condemned to death.

His head was to be shaved of its thin, brown hair he keeps so carefully combed.

Carnival Over Says Warden

Acting Warden George A. Selby was considerably incensed at the crowd which struggled for a last glimpse of Hauptmann. He ordered cameramen off the steps of the prison entrance and angrily declared:

"The carnival is over when he goes in there. He's just a number from now on."

In the crowd outside the jail was an undertaker who looked at Hauptmann with interest. He said he had buried several victims of the prison chair.

While awaiting Hauptmann's arrival, the undertaker had bought beers for the house at a saloon a block away.

There are six other men in the death house scheduled to go to the electric chair. At least four of these probably will precede Hauptmann. His cell is so located that they must pass in front of it on the way to their doom. Hauptmann will hear their footsteps.

In front of his cell, day and night, will be a guard. He—will be armed with a blackjack with a tear gas bomb attached. The bomb explodes when the weapon is wielded.

A steel bed, attached to the concrete floor, a mattress, a chair, and a table, comprise the furniture of the little cell. There is one high, barred window in the cell.

Seems Calm as He "Vanishes"

Hauptmann will be permitted only one visit per month from a blood relative." He will not be permitted to see his baby, Manfried, however, except once during the week before his execution, Acting Warden Selby has decreed.

A dinner of vegetable soup, pork and beans, bread and butter, black coffee and cake or pie awaits the condemned man tonight.

Hauptmann was amazingly calm as he went into the prison, to disappear forever from the eyes of the world.

His face seemed gaunt and the skin was drawn as tightly as the skin of a drum over his skullish head.

But he needed no support to walk up the prison steps. There was that strange, undecipherable smile on his lips before and after his outburst.

Though his eyes were shaded by a battered gray hat, he squinted and blinked in the bright sunlight.

It was the first time he had been out in the sun for nearly four months. It may be his last.

Hauptmann was in excellent humor when he left the jail in Flemington an hour previously. He posed obligingly for photographers on the steps of the jail before he was taken to an automobile and started on the trip to Trenton.

Then Hauptmann came out, manacled to Sheriff John H. Curtiss and Lieutenant Allen Smith.

"Let's have a picture, Bruno," shouted photographers assembled in front of the jail door in a sweeping semi-circle.

"All right," said Hauptmann.

Smiling broadly, he stood there as photographers banged away. The cameramen's bulbs flared time and again and Hauptmann seemed to enjoy the experience.

"How do you feel?" he was asked.

The photographers were shooting picture after picture, while this conversation was taking place.

"Have you anything to say?" Hauptmann was asked.

"Oh, nothing in particular," he replied.

"Are you afraid, Bruno?"

"Not at all," he answered.

"Have you anything to confess?"

A look of annoyance flitted across Hauptmann's face. He scowled at the reporter who threw this question at him and said:

"If I had anything to confess—and I haven't—I would have done it five months ago."

On Main street and Court street many people had congregated and watched the scene with keen interest.

The prisoner was manacled to Sheriff Curtiss and Lieutenant Smith. The sheriff took his dog along.

They took Hauptmann around the side of the jail to Court street where he was placed in a waiting automobile.

The motorcade included four automobiles in which were Sheriff Curtiss, deputy sheriffs and a detachment of state troopers.

No motorcycle escort was provided because of the slippery condition of the road from Flemington to Trenton.

Hauptmann was in the back seat of the second car with his pair of manacled guards. The car was driven by Sergeant James Crawford of the state police. Beside him sat Sheriff Curtiss.

Lindbergh To Get Bid To Execution

(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 16—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh will have the opportunity to witness the electrocution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, Universal Service was exclusively informed here.

Colonel Lindbergh will be invited to be an "official witness" at the execution "if he cares to" by Major Mark O. Kimberling, newly appointed warden at the state prison.

The offer will be made in accordance with an old New Jersey custom which directs that relatives of murder victims be permitted to be witnesses at state executions.

Two Nazi Girls Face Axe As Spies

By International News Service

Berlin, Feb. 16—At least two persons were sentenced to death today when the most sensational spy trial since the Nazi regime took power ended in utmost secrecy, according to rumors sweeping Berlin.

Those involved were reported to include two members of the nobility—Baron Sosnowski, a Polish army officer, the Baroness Benita Von Berg.

A woman employe of the Reichswehr ministry, Fraulein Von Wegener, also was reported implicated. Two other girls are reported to have been given life sentences.

No announcement regarding verdict or sentences was made by the Ministry of Propaganda despite reports to the contrary published in London.

The defendants, it is understood, were accused of selling military secrets to some unnamed foreign power.

The espionage trial was before the dread Secret People's Tribunal whose deliberations are shrouded in secrecy.

Sentences handed down by the People's Tribunal are carried out with utmost speed, and those convicted today will face death by the headsman's axe on Monday.

Chancellor Hitler alone has the power to intervene. He is understood to be considering the verdicts.

RUM SKIPPER Must Go to Jail

Halifax, Feb. 16 (AP)—Captain Ross Gibson, who commanded the rum-runner Kromhout when she made a dramatic escape from a Coast Guard cutter set on more than a year ago, must serve the three-year sentence imposed in court here, the supreme court of Nova Scotia decided today.

The Lunenburg skipper had been sentenced on charges of stealing his ship, stealing her cargo of liquor, and obstructing seagoing Royal Canadian mounted police. He was given three years on each charge, the sentences to run concurrently.

Defense counsel did not indicate whether a further appeal was planned.

MATRON'S Word Jails Man

Balkan was charged with breaking and entering in the night time the Middleboro home of Mrs. Pratt. The slip-cover, police say, was found in a car rented by Balkan.

Snub Bruno

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 16—Bruno Hauptmann, who exchanged his roomy ball pen in the local jail for a smaller cell in "death row" of the Trenton state penitentiary today, will have to look elsewhere than quiet little Flemington for a financial depositor.

Cashiers of both the Flemington National Bank and the Hunterdon County National Bank today announced, without explanation, that neither institution would act as trustee to receive funds which may be contributed for Hauptmann's defense.

KAMINSKI SORRY HE NEVER WED

Death Cell Lament

"I'm sorry I never married and had a family!"

Too late today, Alexander Kaminski, murderer, jail breaker and thug, sat in the death house in Charlestown.

Next week, probably just after midnight Tuesday morning, the electric chair will exact its toll for a few short years of rampant crime.

Kaminski has a mother and father, three sisters and two brothers in New Britain, Connecticut. He has another brother who is serving life imprisonment for trying to free him in a Springfield court.

Kaminski's career started with petty holdups. It ended with the murder of Merritt W. Hayden, who guarded him at Springfield jail. In between are the sordid experiences of a youth who thought he could win in crime.

He must die at the age of 25.

Two of the sisters, the Misses Mary and Celia Kaminski, visited him today. Other visitors were his brother, William, the latter's wife and Joseph Crogi, a first cousin, and Attorney Edward L. Fenton, his attorney. Other members of his family visited Friday.

Then Came Jail

It was only two years ago that gasoline stations and small stores in Connecticut were being held up with uncanny regularity.

With Paul Wargo, 21, of Wallingford, Conn., he served time in Connecticut jails.

The arrest that led to his doom was for carrying a revolver in Springfield. Wargo and Kaminski were sentenced to six months each in the Hampden county jail at Springfield. Wargo now is serving life for his part in the death of Guard Hayden.

Kaminski vowed he would never serve the six months.

He had been in hardly a month when the sensational break brought death to Guard Hayden, quick capture of Wargo and the stirring manhunt for Kaminski lasted months.

The two picked a Sunday church service on October 22, 1933, for the time to make the break for liberty.

Brutally Beaten

While other inmates were singing hymns, Hayden was waylaid and brutally beaten. His keys were taken. They opened a series of barred gates to the roof of the jail workshop. The fugitives scaled a 12-foot wall and were away.

Hayden's body was found half an hour later. He had been killed by a triple fracture of the skull.

Wargo and Kaminski had slipped out of line as they marched to the Sunday morning chapel services. They hid in a workshop.

But Guard Hayden appeared just as they stepped from the workshop. A heavy stick from the workshop was the weapon that felled him. Wargo was given the life sentence because of testimony later that Kaminski was the one who struck the guard.

Kaminski was eventually arrested at Lynchburg, Va., on a burglary charge. Fingerprints identified him as the man wanted for murder in Massachusetts. Virginia authorities surrendered him.

Again he vowed that he would escape. He said he would never die in the electric chair.

Eventually came his conviction for first degree murder. Sentence was delayed. He stayed in the Hampden County jail because the law provides a murderer cannot be ported to state prison until the death sentence has been officially passed.

Kaminski's "Error"

Scandal against several jail guards reared. Two guards were dismissed when they admitted they fell asleep within eight feet of Kaminski's cell.

Through Connecticut, western Massachusetts and various other points of New England, the now much-feared jail breaker and murderer was reported.

Curiosity of the bus driver revealed a .38-caliber revolver, steel saws, key saws and other burglar tools in the bag. The fugitive fell into a trap that was laid for him at the Albany bus terminal.

Transfer of Kaminski to state prison was effected soon after his return to Springfield jail. The death sentence was pronounced.

Death was originally scheduled for Jan. 30 but Governor Curley granted a 30-day reprieve that he last week refused to extend.

Kaminski will be the 46th to die in the electric chair since that manner of death became law in Massachusetts.

Betty Gow Punches Woman

By Associated Press

New York, Feb. 16—After a turbulent embarkation, Betty Gow, the dark-haired Scotch nurse maid to the kidnaped Lindbergh baby, was at sea today on the liner Berengaria en route home.

Center of a whirlwind of excitement and confusion on the Cunard Line pier, she ended a helter-skelter chase over the liner with a punch to the jaw of an over-curious woman bystander.

Unable to find her stateroom in the tourist class, Miss Gow and her friends were followed by a crowd of curious passengers and visitors up and down decks.

As the chase increased, a middle-aged woman wearing glasses pushed her way through the crowd and snatched Miss Gow by the arm.

"Let's have a look at you," she demanded.

"Let me alone," cried the young woman and launched a small doubled fist to the woman's face.

JURY To Ballot in STAGE ACT

By International News Service

New York, Feb. 16—The Hauptmann trial jury may go on the stage in a "dignified" way.

Charles Walton, foreman of the 12 men and women who voted to send Bruno Richard Hauptmann to the electric chair, today confirmed a rumor that they expected to go on a vaudeville tour.

"It will be very dignified and nice," he said. A $8 a day necessity, he expects to get $800 a week.

Plans for the proposed tour will be completed tomorrow in the home of Mrs. May F. Breisford, Juror No. 10, president of the Hauptmann Trial Jury Association.

She and the others including Verna Snyder, the 291-pound occupant of the No. 2 chair, and Lisette C. Deo, the juror with the bad heart, expect to get $300 a week.

In the act planned they will take ballots as they did in the jury room while an announcer tells the story of the trial.

Burger also has asked Edward J. Reilly to give his consent to a vaudeville tour of Mrs. Anna Hauptmann through the Middle West. Burger said today his backers had already deposited $25,000 in a New York bank as a guarantee. The money will be used to finance Hauptmann's appeal, according to the plan.

Still Hopes

By International News Service

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 15—Bruno Richard Hauptmann sighed today as he looked at the sun-bathed countryside on his 35 mile ride from Flemington to the state prison, where he must die. Speaking to Harry McCrea, warden of the Hunterdon county jail, who was in the car with the prisoner, Hauptmann said:

"It is the kind of a day I would like to be out in the country with my wife and child, warden. But I am innocent and I think maybe I'll be with them again before many months."

Ex-Governors Say:

'LET BRUNO DIE'

POLL SHOWS FEW IN SENATE FAVOR MERCY

By ROBERT McGILL
Copyright, 1935, by International News Service

Washington, Feb. 16—A majority of the former governors in the Senate would let Bruno Richard Hauptmann die in the electric chair in the belief he was fairly convicted of the kidnap-killing of the Lindbergh baby, a poll by International News Service disclosed today.

Two former governors—Senators LYNN J. FRAZIER (R.) North Dakota, and W. J. BULOW (D.) of South Dakota, would commute the death penalty to life imprisonment, but only because they conscientiously oppose capital punishment. Eight others declared for death the penalty.

Several former governors shared the opinion of Senator WILLIAM E. BORAH (R) of Idaho, that Hauptmann had confederates in the kidnaping and that the case is only partially solved. These ex-governors however, declared this was no reason for commuting Hauptmann's death sentence.

For Commutation

SENATOR LYNN J. FRAZIER: "We have no capital punishment law in North Dakota. I am opposed to capital punishment. Under the circumstances, if I were the governor and had the power, I would commute the death sentence to life imprisonment.

SENATOR WILLIAM J. BULOW: "I vetoed a capital punishment bill while governor of South Dakota. I'm fundamentally opposed to capital punishment. For that reason, I would commute the sentence of death."

Against Mercy

SENATOR ARTHUR CAPPER (R) of Kansas: "I don't think I'd interfere with that verdict. It seems to me the state made a very strong showing of guilt. There is no doubt others were involved in the crime but Hauptmann appears to have been the ringleader. I would let the verdict of the jury stand."

SENATOR DUNCAN U. FLETCHER (D.) of Florida: "If Hauptmann is guilty of the most unconscionable crime in all history, he should be punished according to law. The jury found him guilty after a fair trial. He is not entitled to clemency. Of course, he may have had help in committing the crime, but that doesn't change his guilt."

SENATOR JOHN G. TOWNSEND, JR. (R.) of Delaware: "Convinced as I am that Hauptmann is guilty of the worst crime ever committed within my knowledge, I believe he should pay the penalty of death."

SENATOR RICHARD B. RUSSELL (D.) of Georgia: "From the little knowledge I have of the case, I would not commute the death sentence."

SENATOR ROBERT D. CAREY (R.) of Wyoming: "Having read a summary of the evidence, there is no question in my mind that the state proved his guilt. It would make no difference if he had confederates, because he would be equally guilty as an accessory."

By Associated Press

Two men were shot at a Harlem apartment house as police used their guns to break up a clash between striking employes and several elevator operators who remained on duty.

Three men were arrested at a Bronx apartment house for beating up an elevator operator who began work there yesterday.

SENATE Townsend HEARING

HARRISON HITS PENSION PLAN

Washington, Feb. 16—Dr. F. E. Townsend explained his $200-a-month old age pension plan to a skeptical Senate Finance Committee today and had rather a tough time.

The elderly Californian was given free rein to explain the plan. But when he concluded he was dismayed at the barrage of sarcastic and humorous questions fired at him.

Each person 60 years of age or over would receive a pension of $200 every month from the government, providing the money be all spent within the 30-day period, under the proposal of Townsend.

"No one would save any money," he said.

"They wouldn't have to," Townsend retorted. "They would be assured of money from the Treasury and their spending would keep business going."

Harrison asked what the doctor meant when he provided the pension would have to be spent each month on "commodities or services."

"Would shooting crap with a half-dozen other fellows be considered 'services,'"

"I should say not," replied the witness.

"The," interjected Senator Barkley (D.) of Kentucky, "would purchase of dice constitute an expenditure for commodities?"

Townsend thought a minute.

"Well," he said, "I guess it would."

Harrison said that with 24,000,000 or more aged, the plan would cost $24,000,000,000 a year. A two per cent tax would raise only five billion dollars leaving a deficit of $19,000,000,000.

"Yes," Townsend said, "but we will not be able to put 10,000,000 on the pension immediately. It took two years to get 4,000,000 men into the army. We would have to examine each citizen."

"Would we have much trouble drafting people to take this pension?" Senator Connally (D-Tex.) asked sarcastically.

"Oh now," Townsend said.

"Well you were comparing it to raising an army," the Texan said.

TRIO Keep Police BUSY

VARIED CRIMES MARK NIGHT

By Associated Press

Maynard, Feb. 16—Three arrests, two alleged attempted jail breaks, an attempt to fire the lockup where $1000 worth of fireworks were stored, and a cross-country chase punctuated by pistol shots marked a whirlwind night for this town's police.

Weary policemen told the story today as they marched William Roch, 22; Joseph Harisimczyk, 22, and Ralph G. Lingley, 21, all of Maynard, to court.

First, they said, state troopers lugged Roch to the local jail, after his arrest for a disturbance in a Maynard dance hall.

At midnight, a patrolman said he found Harisimczyk trying to open Roch's cell door. He locked Harisimczyk up, too. An hour later, he said, he found Lingley also busy with the lock on Roch's cell door.

Lingley fled, with Officer Edward Johnson in pursuit. Eight times Officer Johnson fired his pistol before Lingley halted and was also locked up.

Meanwhile, police said, Roch had attempted to fire bedding in his cell. Two cells away was $1,000 worth of fireworks.

The police said they found a blow torch, hacksaws and a chisel among the youths' possessions. Today, in Concord District Court, Harisimczyk and Lingley faced charges of attempting to deliver a prisoner, while Roch faced arraignment for creating a disturbance.

Rome, Feb. 16—An official communique issued today said the first contingent of Italian troops embarked for Italy's African colonies this afternoon.

One battalion of Blackshirts sailed from Naples, the announcement said, after being reviewed by Crown Prince Umberto.

The same communique announced that Premier Mussolini reviewed two other Blackshirt battalions previous to their departure for East Africa. A battalion consists of about 700 men.

Mussolini first made an address to the troops, after which they passed in review before him. They had full colonial equipment and pith helmets. Il Duce was given an ovation when he left the barracks.

Meanwhile hundreds of soldiers moved into Rome from northern points, preparatory to embarkation for Africa.

Reports that the first contingent would sail today failed to ruffle Negradas Yeous, Ethiopian charge d'affaires, who declared:

Hope Dims In Hunt For Riel Girl

Worcester, Feb. 16—If the missing Etta Riel is still alive—mother love must solve the disappearance.

If the 20-year-old former student of State Teachers' College doesn't return to feel the clasp of her six-months-old daughter at the Oxford home of her sister, there is but one answer . . .

Etta Riel is dead!

These were the deductions of state detectives today as reports of her appearance in Worcester during the past week seemed to collapse.

Some authorities held to the belief that the girl was alive and in hiding. Others clung to the theory that she is dead—be it suicide or murder—to forever hide a romance of her college days.

Hopes for her life were held only by reports of five Worcester men that they saw and talked with the missing girl since she vanished from Oxford on the early morning of November 22.

But the best hope along that line was exploded today by William P. Finneran, chief of the Worcester police detectives. It followed a report of John T. Dorey, 40 Bowdoin street, who said the girl appeared in his home last week to solicit food.

Superintendent Finneran had Dorey look at an Irving street girl who had been missing at that time. Dorey immediately exclaimed:

"That's the girl I thought was the missing Riel girl."

'FINDERS Keepers'—Boys AWARDED GOLD

By Associated Press.

Baltimore, Feb. 16—"Finders are keepers," Judge Eugene O'Dunne ruled today in awarding to two 16-year-old boys $359 ancient gold coins they dug up from a treasure trove in the cellar of an old house here.

The old coins have a face value of $11,427, but because of their antiquity government experts have estimated they are worth approximately $28,000. From $1 to $20 denomination, some of them were dated as early as 1834.

Theodore Jones and Henry Groh upon whom the court bestowed this small fortune, are sons of poor parents. Their families were on municipal relief last August when they unearthed their rich find.

They were digging in the cellar when they discovered the gold hoard.

Approximately a dozen claimants to the treasure appeared, but Judge O'Dunne eliminated the others one by one. In his final ruling he decided against the owners of the property where the gold was found.

SLAYER Faces Gamble FOR LIFE

SON OF JUDGE DUE ON STAND

By International News Service

Pawnee, Okla., Feb. 16—Dr. Karl Menninger, doctor of mental diseases and disorders, took the witness stand today to testify in behalf of 19-year-old Phil Kennamer, son of United States Judge Franklin E. Kennamer.

He was another in the parade of witnesses designed to show that young Phil was driven "so crazy" by his love for Virginia Wilcox, 19-year-old daughter of Homer Wilcox, Tulsa multimillionaire, that he blew up when shown an $20,000 extortion note written to Wilcox by Johnny Gorrell.

Phil did not know "right from wrong," the defense contends, and shot and killed Gorrell, Kansas City dental college student, as he sat in an automobile in a lonely section of Tulsa's most exclusive residential district on Thanksgiving night, 1934.

Phil must gamble for his life today.

If young Phil, smiling, confident, unmoved even when his father weeps on the witness stand as he unfolds the story of Phil's shortcomings that made him a "problem" son almost from birth, takes the witness stand today, he plays safe and may escape death or life in prison, if he gambles, stays off that chair. In this little, white-walled courthouse, he has a chance to win all—to go scot-free.

Under Oklahoma law, young Phil, taking the witness stand, may be found guilty of manslaughter and with luck escape with a minimum of four years in prison.

If he does not testify in his own behalf he has a chance to go absolutely free—or die in the electric chair.

Gorrell was found shot to death in his automobile in a lonely section of Tulsa last Thanksgiving night.

Young Phil, son of Federal Judge Franklin E. Kennamer, confessed that he killed him. His attorneys said Phil was "so crazy" about Virginia Wilcox, beautiful 19-year-old daughter of Homer Wilcox, Tulsa oil multimillionaire, he "blew up" and not knowing "right from wrong," killed Gorrell because the student had framed a $20,000 extortion and kidnaping plot involving Virginia.

PARDON BROKERS FACE CURLEY DRIVE

Basing his charges on information gleaned from advance copies of an expose that will be launched by the Boston Sunday Advertiser tomorrow, Governor James M. Curley last night directed a withering attack at the parole peddlers and pardon brokers of the state.

He spoke over Station WEEI.

Mr. Curley complimented the Sunday Advertiser and W. R. Hearst and all the Hearst newspapers for their persistent war on crime.

Turning directly to the question of pardons and paroles, he said:

That the Advertiser expose and his own observations convince him there has been flagrant graft in the matter; that convicts have paid money to get release.

Charges Pact

That there is in force a pact between the underworld and political lawyers "and others."

That the detectives of the State Department of Public Safety should be increased from 17 to 50 men.

That critical days are ahead for society with crooked insurance adjusters, crooked lawyers, white slavers, dope peddlers and criminals at large.

That the city police have been woefully inadequate, and worse—pointing to the Sweeney slaying in the Cosmos Club.

"Twelve hours had elapsed before state detectives entered the Cosmos Club killing," he recalled.

"The city police had locked the doors and gone. If state officers hadn't gone in, the Sportsmen's club above never would have been raided."

A moment later, he boldly charged that certain city police officials and underworld leaders were in alliance.

Scores Hultman

In his most sardonic vein, the Governor blasted former Police Commissioner Hultman's claim to police efficiency.

"Whenever a crime was committed, he planted an opium layout in an inoffensive Chinaman's place of business, then moved in with his men," he alleged.

"Eighteen months ago, I noticed that. It was a petty Monday sensation. People looked for it, as they look for the Monday auto accident list.

"After I directed attention to the matter, the raids virtually stopped. There have been two in 18 months."

Reverting to the Cosmos Club outrage, Governor Curley said:

"Since that sensation, the Boston police have made more successful raids than in the previous two years. And that was about a week ago."

Governor Curley averred criminals "in cahoots" with some of the corruptibles on the city police force were "lying low until it all blows over."

Pardon Policy

In a ringing challenge to the underworld, he promised the people he would not award pardons or paroles to unworthy applicants.

And he specified Alexander Kaminsky of Springfield, murderer.

"My mail has been flooded with applications for commutation," he declared.

"I see no reason to give him life imprisonment instead of the chair. I do not intend to interfere."

The governor made it clear he is willing to hear applications in cases of unfortunates who are victims of circumstances. He even has a short list of such deserving cases under consideration, it has been learned.

The expose by the Sunday Advertiser, showing the way the pardon and parole power has been abused, will run for several weeks.

It is factual, well documented and a sinister commentary on conditions in the prisons and without.

GREEN Hits Relief PAY PLAN

'UNACCEPTABLE TO LABOR'

By Associated Press

Washington, Feb. 16—Organized labor today flatly opposed the administration-supported substitute for the McCarran prevailing wage amendment to the $4,880,000,000 relief bill. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, termed it "unsatisfactory and unacceptable to labor."

In a letter to each senator, Green said the substitute, offered by Senator Russell (D., Ga.) and approved by the Senate Appropriations Committee, "will in no way protect labor in its efforts to preserve wage standards set in different communities as a result of years of struggle and effort on the part of organized labor."

Instead of requiring the payment of prevailing wages on all public works projects, the substitute would permit the President to fix the different rates of wages for various types of work, and would require him to establish the prevailing wage in any community where a lower rate of pay was found to be adversely affecting the general scale.

"We sincerely wish and desire," Green wrote, "that standard rates of pay established in each community shall be guarded, preserved and protected.

"We are of the opinion that a relief wage established on a lower basis than the prevailing rates of pay will tear down our wage standards and either directly or indirectly cause reductions in the wages of American working people."

GOLD Decision Seen FOR MONDAY

By International News Service

Washington, Feb. 16—In the quiet of a secluded basement room in the Capitol, the nine justices of the Supreme Court today met for regular conference on business under advisement—with a possibility a decision would be reached in the gold cases.

While many government officials expect the court to announce its decision in the gold cases Monday, there was no authentic word on the subject. The court will take a two weeks' recess after Monday.

New York, Feb. 16 (INS)—Anticipating a possible decision in the gold clause cases over the week-end, governors of the New York Stock Exchange were ordered today to hold themselves in readiness for a special meeting Monday morning at 9 o'clock before the market opens.

Codos, Rossi on Distance Record Hop

By Associated Press

Istres, France, Feb. 16—Paul Codos and Maurice Rossi, holders of the world's long distance flight record, were soaring over Morocco this afternoon, headed for a non-stop South Atlantic crossing to Buenos Aires, trying to hang up a new record.

They took off at 6:36 a. m. in their heavily-loaded plane the same "Joseph Lebrix" in which they flew from New York to Syria in 1933. Radio reports from their craft reaching Le Bourget air field placed them over Cap Nao, traveling at 125 miles an hour, 3½ hours after the take-off. At 2:10 p. m. (9:10 a. m., E. S. T.) they passed over Tangier, Morocco, and at 3:16 p. m. (11:16 a. m., E. S. T.) they were reported over Rabat, on the Northern coast of Africa.

Their present record is 5653 miles, from New York to Syria in August, 1933.

For the first time the plane carries mail, in an attempt to prove non-stop flights are practical for mail planes. The flight is financed by the air ministry.

The Pleasant Life and Adventures of One 'World's Richest Girl'

James H. R. Cromwell and his bride, the rich Doris Duke. Here is their picture story. | Few richer babies were ever born than Doris Duke. | Her first love, a pony, she rode to the candy stores. | Private tutors told Doris what life was all about. | She read many movie magazines but saw no movies. | Miss Duke studied at the Sorbonne in Paris. | Her father died, and at 17 she had $53,000,000.

Doris Shunned Fortune Hunters Who Sought Her Millions

The King and Queen of Italy consoled the young heiress. | Had to wear dark glasses and hire guards. | Permitted "nice" photographers to take pictures. | A Mdvani failed to impress her. She wanted love. | Fortune hunters got a cold shoulder from her generally. | Gave her great danes expensive collars on her birthday.

More Millions Rolled in on Doris But Love Waited

On coming of age in 1930, the richest girl had a simple dinner. | But her Newport debut that year was something to talk about. | In 1934, $30,000,000 more rolled into little Doris' lap. | At Miami she wore a comfortable 3-year-old bathing suit. | Jimmy Cromwell was a good student at Penn University. | Jimmy was a dashing yachtsman and had good war record.

And So the World's Richest Girl Found the Right Young Man

He wed Delphine Dodge in 1920 but it ended in divorce court. | He met the charming Doris at a swim club at Bar Harbor. | Jimmy tried being a financier and he was a good boxer, too. | He loved Doris but they had a bit of spat 2 years ago. | Reconciled, he gave a smart dinner dance for her. | And so Doris spurned the Prince and wed the gallant Jimmy.

TEACHERS' POST LEGION PLAN

canism. The work you are doing is being heralded throughout the country."

Referring to the plan of William J. Corey, submaster of Brighton high school for a teachers post—an idea that has the full support of Chairman Charles Mackey, of the Boston School Board—the Legion executive said:

"I was glad to hear that a post composed of school teachers is being originated in Massachusetts and that you have under consideration at your executive board meeting today (these words addressed to State Legion officials who were present) the issuance of a charter for a school teachers' post.

"The American Legion is particularly interested in the kind of Amercanism that is being taught in the schools of the United States.

"The American Legion wants to know that that knowledge of Americanism is the right knid—the kind that you and I learned, not in school books, but in service rendered to the nation in time of emergency.

"I urge that you take favorable action on the issuance of a charter for a school teachers' post.

"I hope that many more posts of a similar nature will be formed throughout the country so that members of the American Legion who are educators can be called on to be guards day after day in the institutions of learning and to see that the children of the United States are given the education necessary for the protection of the country."

At a luncheon tendered to Belgrano in the Hotel Statler by Governor Curley, the Governor said that he wanted to express the gratitude of the American people to the Legion for kping us out of the World Court.

"I realize that this action saved the peace of the world," said Curley in recounting the martial sights that he saw on his visit to Europe last year and the causes of war that were supplied by recent Europeon assassinations.

Governor Curley also urged the Legion to keep up its fight for adequate air defenses, saying that the public looked to the Legion rather than to the Army and the Navy to carry on this fight.

Another speaker at the luncheon was Major General Fox Connor, commander of the First Corps Area. He said that the greatest lover of peace is the man who makes war.

"The American Legion," he said, "differs from other groups in that it knows that you can't pass edicts to prevent children from playing with toy soldiers any more than you can prevent nations from making war."

Besides lauding the Spanish American War Veterans, of which Mayor Mansfield is a member, for taking a stand like that of the Legion, Belgrano again predicted payment of the bonus.

"No Concession"

Belgrano's attention was called to a recent Washington report that the White House was considering a compromise on the bonus. According to this plan, it would be paid in five annual installments.

"So far as the Legion is concerned," Belgrano said, "there can be no compromise on the bonus.

"It is seldom that the person on the right side of a question offers to compromise or asks for an armistice."

The Legion leader made it clear that he was not criticizing President Roosevelt. All of these proposals, he said, have emanated from "congressional leaders close to the White House."

"President Roosevelt has never made any direct or official statement that he would veto the bonus, although he said to Congress that if legislation of this character is passed, Congress must provide ways and means to make it effective," explained Belgrano, who yesterday predicted that the bonus payment issue would be settled favorably during the current session of Congress.

BALLOT Bill of Paul TO BAN "REDS"

A determined move to drive communistic and other "red" organizations out of the political arena will be made Monday when a petition and bill of Representative Richard F. Paul of Canton is heard before the legislative committee on legal affairs.

Paul, a former commander of the State department of the American Legion, would prohibit placing on ballots the name of any political party advocating sedition or treason.

The bill reads, in part:

"No name or designation of any political party or organization which advocates the overthrow by force or violence of any local, state or national government, or which advocates or carries a program of sedition or of treason by radio, speech or press shall be written or marked on any ballot."

The bill further provides that the name of no new party shall be put on any ballot unless an affidavit has been filed with the Secretary of State that such new party does not advocate overthrow of existing government and is not affiliated with any party or organization that does so advocate.

BETTY ALDEN

on 'Beacon Hill'

Susan Wigglesworth Weds in Milton Church

By BETTY ALDEN

WHITE SNAPDRAGONS and cybotium ferns were banked at the altar of Milton's fashionable First Parish Church at half after noon today for the marriage of Susan Holdrege Wigglesworth to Edward Fleming Watkins . . .

The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norton Wigglesworth of Milton, was given in marriage by her father, and the Rev. Vivian T. Pomeroy read the wedding service . . .

MRS. E. F. WATKINS

Spring shades of pale green and peach with flowers of contrasting hues combined to make the wedding party one of unusual beauty . . . Miss Martha Wigglesworth, as maid of honor, led the procession, wearing peach moire fashioned with puff sleeves and low square neck . . . She carried an arm bouquet of blue iris with token roses.

* * *

Bridesmaids in Green

MISS JOSEPHINE COX of Hyde Park, Miss Faith Rockefeller of Greenwich, Ct., and Miss Alvina Looram of New York, wore pale green moire dresses and carried yellow primroses for their roles as bridesmaids . . .

The bridegroom, son of Mrs. Edward F. Watkins and the late Mr. Watkins of Spartansburg, N. C., was attended by Vernon Bonar of New York and Spartansburg as best man, and his corps of ushers included the Messrs. Henry R. Watson, Jr., of Milton, Charles P. Clifford, Jr., John P. Chase, Lamar Soutter, Nathaniel S. Clifford and Charles B. Bradley, Jr. . . .

Following the wedding the guests greeted the bridal couple at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wigglesworth . . . and showered their felicitations upon them as they left for their honeymoon . . . The bride chose an ensemble of wine-colored wool with a matching hat as her going-away costume . . .

The bride is a graduate of Milton Academy and of Westover School, and because of her versatility as a singer and entertainer she has starred in many Vincent Club shows and amateur theatricals produced by the summer colony on the North Shore . . .

Mr. Watkins attended Clemson University in South Carolina and is now engaged in business in Boston . . . After April first he and his bride will be at home in Cambridge . . . .

Vincent Club Tryouts

THE ANXIOUSLY AWAITED try-outs for the Vincent Ventures of 1935 will at last be under way at promptly 9:30 on Monday morning . . . John Hall, coach of many Vincent shows in former years, Mrs. Atherton Loring, Jr., and Helen Moseley will be at the Somerset to place the seal of approval upon the talents offered by old and new members of the club . . .

It will probably take quite a bit of encouragement to coax hesitant debutantes to overcome their stage fright to the point of actually offering their favorite theme song or tap dance before such veteran performers as Nancy Whitman, Sally White, Nancy Morison, Marion Leeson, Elinor Fay, Elizabeth Reed and Mrs. Theodore Lyman Eliot who have promised to try out again this year . . .

LOVE DENIED

By Louise Long and Ethel Doherty

Angers Julie

CHAPTER 30

Julie ran to Lucien with it. He read the item in astonishment. "What do you know about that?

. . . Well, maybe Stuart'll get down to work now . . . Julie, you go in and pick up your glass just as you did in the last scene, and then sit down at the table and look out—about here—and say your lines to Harvey. Go on in and rehearse."

About three o'clock a messenger came out on the set. "Mr. Steinberg wants Miss De Vore in his office as soon as she's through working."

"You can go along now," said Morrow.

"Mr. Steinberg," she said quickly, her voice trembling, "can I help it if people have bad minds?"

"Why, what do you mean, Julie?"

"People coming out on the set and accusing me—I'm a lady, Mr. Steinberg, and I'm not used to people like that!"

"What's the matter, Sam?" Mr. Steinberg turned to the Production Manager inquiringly.

"Why," Abrams hurried to say, insinuatingly, "don't you think, A. Z., that Miss De Vore ought to wear . . . uh, more . . . a bit more with that dress? The scenes, you know—"

"Take off your scarf, Julie . . . Don't be an ass, Sam! It's on the strength of her sex appeal that we're giving her a contract!"

"Con-contract!" screeched Julie, sitting down suddenly.

"Yes," Mr. Steinberg said in his kindly, fatherly way, "we're talking about giving you a long-term contract. That's what I called you in for. We're not going to let you play beauties any more. The first year will be featured parts and leads—Cinderella stuff. Then, if you catch on with the fans the way we think you will, it means stardom, the second year."

Julie Is Dazzled

Stardom! Julie was dazzled.

"Take a copy of this contract with you, Julie," said Mr. Steinberg. "Read it over and see what you're signing . . . Notice the clause about behaving yourself."

"You'll never have to worry about my morals getting in the paper, Mr. Steinberg," Julie assured him, virtuously. "I was brought up in a convent—and I've practically lived in one ever since!"

When "The Big Chief" let her go, Julie hurried to a telephone and called the Standing house in Beverly Hills. Brooks answered.

"Is Mr. Pennington there?" asked Julie.

"Mr. Pennington is not at home, madam."

"Will you tell me where he's living now?"

"I cannot say, madam."

"Listen. This is Lucien Morrow's secretary. Mr. Morrow said I must get hold of Mr. Pennington—"

"Mr. Morrow? Yes. I had orders to give him Mr. Pennington's address if he called. Just a moment."

When Julie heard the familiar address of the Hollywood hill-top she gasped. "Well, I might have known! Thank you."

But he was at home. She heard him whistling before she got to the door.

Stuart Kisses Julie

Very cautiously she took off her coat and hat and laid them on the old refrigerator in the screen porch. The whistling did not cease.

Stuart was not aware of her until he heard the familiar pop as she removed the tin cap from the beer bottle. He turned swiftly. Julie's heart beating fast, went on playing her part, pouring foaming beer into the glasses.

She carried his glass to him and held up her lips to be kissed.

"Jehosaphat!" he exclaimed, rubbing his mouth with the back of his hand, "that lip rouge is bitter!"

"Oh, I'm sorry!" She was ready to cry with vexation and disappointment. "I wish I'd remembered to take it off!" She scrubbed at her lips with her handkerchief.

"Working, Stuart!" Julie asked. "Not yet. . . . Oh, those sketches—I wired the soap people I had a new idea for an ad. They wired back to send along a sketch. So now I've got to find an idea."

"Those old ads!" she gasped, indignantly. "Why should you have to do those any more? Didn't she give you any money—?"

"Certainly not!" he snapped. "See, Stuart," she said, pulling a legal paper out of her makeup box as she came back to him.

"Contract, Julie?"

"Uh-huh. I haven't signed it yet. Two years with options. Look at this about the second year."

Julie on His Lap

"A star! Why, Julie, that's splendid!"

"If the public likes me."

"They will. You're sure to make good." He patted her shoulder. "All your dreams coming true!"

Julie stayed and got dinner for him.

"Darling, I'd rather have you than all the careers in the world!"

"No you wouldn't, really, Julie. I'm just an old stick-in-the-mud. You're already used to the glitter of success."

"Stuart," she said at last softly, "will you marry me?"

"What!" He made her sit up and looked at her frowning.

"I mean it. I've always wanted you—" Her eyes were glowing and ardent.

"Why Julie!" He took her face in his hands and looked into her eyes a long minute. "You actually care enough about me—to throw over that magnificent contract to be a star? I can't believe it."

She dropped her eyes. "But that wouldn't make sense, Stuart. Of course I'd go on working—"

"Oho!" His arms relaxed.

"Going to Be Free"

"But listen, darling. I'm going to make a whale of a lot of money. Not as much as she has, of course. But lots! And I want to share it with you. I want you to accept me when I go to openings in my ermine coat. You look so distinguished, Stuart. And you are distinguished—in your line. It'd be a lot better publicity for me to marry an artist than just another screen actor. You could just go on painting and painting. And you'd never need to worry about money—I'll make plenty for us both—"

She ran out of breath and was suddenly disturbed by the satiric twinkle in the blue eyes surveying her.

Rev. Arthur Lee Kinsolving

Each winter there dawns some morning which, like the first yellow blossom of spring that shyly puts its head above ground, ushers in the first hint that spring is yet to be.

On Monday last there was a quality in the air, a brilliance to the slanting rays of the rising sun, that carried with it a promise of high expectancy.

It sufficed to remind one that there was indeed such a thing as springtime.

There is such a thing as spring to life. And how we forget it. For with the sun on Monday morning rose again the sense of the joy of life, the promise of it, the privilege and wonder and beauty of life.

And the recognition of these things may be frozen in us, and buried fast underground.

It should be our goal to learn to live on the edge of this sense of anticipation.

We should keep abreast of this springtime in the soul. Carl Sandburg writes that Lincoln's mother had that faculty.

Life in the pioneer days on the frontier, and in poverty, was perpetual privation and hardship.

And yet in the cabin kitchen, or on the hard journeys westward, she never failed to see beyond to the promise of the far future, the heaven that God has prepared for those who love Him.

My own mother has this childlike sense of anticipation. With her it is a combination of Christian trustfulness in the goodness of God, and the poetic spirit of the ancient Greeks, for she can delight in the whole world if only she sees one daffodil begin to appear amidst the dirty snow in a drab city.

For the Oxford Groups, the Reverend Samuel Shoemaker claimed that they lived on the top of life instead of letting life get on top of them. This is the goal well won by all the finest Christians.

And whenever one knows one has fallen off, and is dragging the ground, as all too often I do, it is well to develop some insight into the truth that joyless people are a prey to all the faults and failures.

Only from this sense can we live generously and make life a fine art.

And this is the plan of God. Joy comes not through luxuries, else only the few might have access to it, but is sweetly distilled from a nature that detects the splendor of God shining on our sphere, and in whose heart is ever an anticipation that "the best is yet to be," that God hath prepared for those who love Him such good things as pass man's understanding.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX GIVES ADVICE ON LOVE

Man-Baiting Drives Lover Away

ARE YOU the sort of a girl who, in matters of the affections, is never content to let well enough alone?

Do you like to tease and prick and prod the youths who are in love with you (even, in fact, the particular youth whose love you secretly return) so that the poor creatures are in a chronic state of totally undeserved misery?

If so, I warn you to mend your ways lest some day, to your amazement, you find yourself stranded in a desert of loveliness, your admirers having found gentler treatment elsewhere.

"About a year and a half ago," she writes, "I saw a great deal of a boy I will call John. He was very hard hit and wanted to marry me immediately. I was willing to marry, but only when I got good and ready.

"Meanwhile there were half a dozen other boys who helped to make life exciting, so I sort of played a game with all of them, including poor John. I knew he didn't like all this, but I didn't know that all of a sudden he would drop out of the picture, as he did.

"Well, a month ago I got lonely and sent for John. He came. I told him I was sorry for my foolishness, and suggested we get married. Can you believe it? He refused! I know he is still in love with me—but he seems to be afraid.

"After this humiliation, what shall I do? Resign myself to being an old maid? The worst of it is, I believe I'm honestly in love with that brute of a John."

Mary's only course, as I have told her, is to swallow her pill, accept John on the basis of friendship and try to prove to him, sincerely and thoroughly, that she is a changed girl. If, as she believes, he still loves her, his resistance will eventually break down and the story may end happily, after all.

'She Gets Her Man'

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

"AS WINTER-SIREN, cuddly in woods, the adorable lines buried in bright ski-pants, the pony-feet lost in inch-thick soled boots, with yet an intriguing rumour of a pretty figure present to the eye—her weapon, a grown-up version of Cupid's famous bow and arrow, gets the center of my heart! So it does when she plays summer-siren too; most of the talked-of figure bared to the sun and water, like a sonquil unburdened of the winter covering. She opens her arms to the fiery sun, and comes away from the embrace with the gold of his kiss on her skin. And she gets her man!

"She is a 'Robin Hood feminine,' and at any distance you can name, if I can see her at all, she neatly divides my heart in half."

Guide to New Books

—By Miles Alden—

WOMAN IN LOVE—By Kathleen Norris—Doubleday, Doran.

For her many avid readers, the publication of the 50th novel from the pen of Kathleen Norris must be an event of something more than passing importance.

It deserves to be celebrated as a physical accomplishment alone. Her publishers should calculate just how many millions of words this pleasant Californian has written for them and just how far they would stretch if laid end to end. It would be impressive.

Always a capable worker, Mrs. Norris again gives her readers—and she has a group that she can call all her own—another interesting story in "Woman in Love."

From a convent school, her heroine steps into the drab life of a tawdry theatrical family; she finds her way onto the stage and into an unfortunate love affair. A true heart, however, finds the path to peace, if not complete happiness, by way of two murder trials.

But it is needless to go on at length about Mrs. Norris. After all, readers must know a woman who has written 50 novels in 25 years—and how many magazine stories?

CONTEMPORARY BIOGRAPHY —By Mark Longaker—University of Pennsylvania Press.

If you have any doubt that the tastes of the reading public change, just look up a 10-year-old list of best sellers.

Probably the most notable change in the public literary taste during the last five or 10 years has been the growing popularity of biography.

It is this that makes this biography of biographers of more than passing interest just now. Besides considering the leading British and American writers in this field, it analyzes the reasons for their popularity and seeks to equip the reader with the critical standards necessary to judge their works.

KATIE PREVENT LEE CHOW'S ESCAPE

CHAPTER 220

MY FATHER'S quizzical smile flashed out again at my query concerning the reason for Katie's shriek for aid while she was helping Jim to guard Lee Chow.

"I suppose I ought to 'make the punishment fit the crime,'" he quoted, "and refuse to gratify your curiosity because it led you to disobey our injunction to lock your door.

"But as I do not care to be a violator of the constitutional guarantee against cruel and unusual punishment to any inhabitant of the United States of America, I shan't inflict this particular torture upon you."

Lillian pushed forward a chair and my father, punctiliously waiting until we were both seated, lowered himself into it.

"I can't give you full particulars," he said. "For those, you'll have to wait until you see Katie, who when she disappeared around the corner of the corridor was volubly explaining to Jim just how Lee Chow had 'put it over on champion dumbbel of vorld.' I regret to say that I am quoting her exact words, but it is needless to say that I took no cognizance of her tirade."

PUT ONE OVER ON JIM

He settled back in his chair, not slouching as so many men do when they sit down for a chat, but with his hands resting on its arms and his fingers beating a slow tattoo upon them.

"I am afraid I cannot give you much light upon the real question, that of Lee Chow's sanity," he began. "From Katie's incoherent exclamations, I gathered that Lee Chow must have diverted Jim's attention in some way—ask for a drink, I gather—and then when Jim came up, the Chinese seized him."

"Harry's knots did not hold?" Lillian interrupted with a query filled with bewilderment and chagrin.

"The knots held all right," my father rejoined. "I saw one set of loops intact. But Lee Chow evidently has the Houdini-like ability to expand and contract his muscles abnormally. He must have expanded them while Harry was tying him up, and then contracted them so that he could get at least one hand free while he was engaging Jim's attention elsewhere. The rest would be easy."

"I'll wager he did his contracting before Katie's sharp eyes came into that room," Lillian said.

My father nodded.

KATIE SAVED THE DAY

"I agree with you," he said. "When she did discover his ruse it was too late for her to do anything save scream, and throw herself tooth and nail upon the Chinese. We had a hard time pulling her away from him. Jim was also holding him, of course, but it was due to Katie's quickness that he did not get out into the hall."

"But, Father," I said slowly, "doesn't all this cunning manipulation of his bonds prove that he was shamming those seeming bursts of mania and that he is plotting some diabolical thing in a brain as unclouded as yours or mine?"

Lillian nodded her head emphatically.

"That's the way it looks to me, too," she said. "But—she shot a keen look at my father—"I can see the 'Chief' does not altogether agree with us."

Manners

TIME TO LEAVE

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When a young lady goes to a theater or a dance with a young man, who makes the first move to go home?

2. When a young lady has been introduced to a young man or elderly man at a gathering, does she say to him, "I am very glad to have met you" upon leaving?

3. Is it proper to wear a wool plaid dress to a school dance?

4. Is it still correct to say "Yes, Ma'am" and "No, Ma'am" or should "Yes, Mrs. Smith" be used instead? D.

1. It is the young lady who makes the suggestion of leaving a party.

2. First, let's reword your question—for it is the man who is introduced to the woman. So—when a man, young or elderly, is introduced to a woman at a party, and the woman, leaving, is saying her goodbye, it is perfectly correct for her to say, "Goodbye, Mr. Allen. I am very glad to have met you." Or the man may say this pleasant comment.

It's just a friendly remark that one individual may graciously say to another individual.

3. What a girl wears to a school dance depends entirely on the degree of formality of the dance. Usually an evening frock is the appropriate thing to wear.

4. "Yes, Mrs. Smith," "No, Mr. Brown"—this is the polite way to answer. It's grand to get the habit early in life, of using the other person's name.

LACE IS Dyed to MATCH SHEER Woolens

By ANNICE BRINK

IT'S GOING to be a lacy, feminine spring as far as frocks are concerned. You ultra-feminine girls who shake your heads a bit at rampant tweeds that can't help but be a bit boyish will turn out in lace trimmings from the first layer to the last.

And if you decide to go suited, it will be a somewhat dressy suit showing a peep of blouse at the neck 10 inches deep in baby lace ruffles.

Val lace dyed to match the fabric is making its debut for spring. Though you may not have sported val lace since baby buggy days, you'll want it when it is dyed navy blue to match the sheer navy wool it decorates.

The same lace, or net footing, is seen featured in ruff bands, pocket trimmings (anything you can do to make a pocket more prominent on your frock is all to the good), and whole shoulderfuls are used on Regency shoulders of evening frocks.

BRIDGE

Wide Open

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

THERE are times when the declarer, in a desperate effort to fulfill his contract, will play a hand in such a manner that if his line of play does not succeed, he will go down several tricks instead of only one.

Edward Hymes, Jr., of New York city, was declarer on the hand below, and he fulfilled a four-heart contract by a very brilliant, "wide-open" line of play.

South, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

	♠ Q 6 ♡ 8 6 ♢ K 9 7 4 2 ♣ K 10 8 3
♠ J 10 7 2 ♡ 10 7 2 ♢ A Q 10 3 ♣ Q J 4	North West East South	♠ K 8 5 4 ♡ 9 5 4 ♢ 8 6 ♣ A 7 6 2
	♠ A J 9 3 ♡ A K Q J 3 ♢ 8 5 ♣ 7 5

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♢	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	2 N T	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

It would be difficult to be more optimistic than was North in the bidding of this hand. At any rate, North and South got to four hearts, and West opened the club Queen.

This was covered with the King in dummy, East's Ace won, and a trump was returned. South won with his Ace.

He then led a low club, and West won the trick with the Jack. West, rather panicky, I must admit, cashed his diamond Ace, and then made the fatal error.

He failed to continue with a diamond to remove dummy's last entry. He led another trump, instead of staking all on his partner's ability to win a spade trick.

He boldly ran all of his trumps, discarding on the last three two diamonds and the spade Queen from dummy.

The Queen was chosen rather than a low one to unblock the suit if the squeeze developed as Mr. Hymes hoped.

The last trump played squeezed both hands. West temporarily handled the situation by discarding one diamond and one club, keeping three spades to the ten, and the Queen and ten of diamonds.

East, of course, had to keep his club nine guarded and a bare down to two clubs and three spades to the King.

The declarer then led the diamond out of his hand, West following, and the trick was won with the King in dummy. East being forced to release one of his spades.

The club ten was led from dummy, a spade discarded from South's hand, and West in turn was squeezed.

He also had to release a spade in order to keep control of the diamond suit.

North now boldly led a low spade from dummy and when East played low the Jack was finessed.

The last two tricks were won with the spade Ace and the spade nine in Mr. Hymes' own hand.

LIPSTICK TRICKS

Tea-Rose and Bright Apricot Hew Indelible Shades

By The Beauty Editor

IF YOU ARE JUST beginning to get bored dithering with lipsticks which promise Dresden-doll effects, but only succeed in turning your mouth into a frightening Totem-pole—sharp, ugly color lines and all—it's time you got acquainted with a new cosmetic wizard.

It's always been our contention that a lipstick to be truly great and deservedly popular must have a rich, cream base and possess an honest-to-goodness indelible look and assurance.

Fresh from New York and Paris salons comes the latest contribution to 1935 glamour. This lipstick is presented in a brand new automatic case, smart and yet practical, so that it is worked with one hand. It is small enough to be carried conveniently in the purse, yet is large enough to hold the big chunky lipstick women have always liked.

One of the nicest things about this little marvel is that it closes tightly and stays that way. Not a speck of dust or cigarette tobacco that accumulates in one's bag can come into contact with the pomade inside. It is as tightly locked as though you had used lock and key.

Even if you have spent your very last cent on a new spring bonnet, you can't afford to pass this lipstick up. And since it's smart these days to possess more than one (they are using two lipsticks at once these days to shape and attain the mouth), you'll not want to overlook this bet.

It has been said that no face is young and sweet enough to stand an exceedingly hard line of color along the entire edge of the mouth. That is why the sponsors of this lipstick have spent a good deal of effort in seeing that the shade gave the desired effect of light and shadow.

If you have a flat mouth and rather broad, uninteresting lips, try using two lipsticks at once. First apply the lighter of the two shades—all over your lips. Wipe the color from the corners of the upper lip. This is where you'll want the darker shade. Then put on the darker shade, drawing it from the corners of the mouth to where it meets the light. Blend it very carefully. You will be amazed at the lovely, provocative effect it gives.

This new automatic lipstick comes in five flattering shades, including a beautiful tea-rose for blondes and a startling apricot for those with brown hair. Black-haired girls will find a flame shade exactly to their taste.

To obtain the name of this indelible, automatic lipstick, write to the Beauty Editor, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope, or call her at Liberty 6000.

Reducing Lotion

Question: I am seventeen years old and have very fat thighs. Can you give me the name of a reducing lotion or cream to reduce them?

A Reader, Boston.

Answer: At your age you should not worry about excess weight. Exercise and diet control should be sufficient in your case. However, if you are over sensitive about the size of your thighs, a complete reducing lotion might help. I have a recipe for a homemade lotion of this kind which you may have by writing to me and enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Margarene Used in Fine Cake Making

By MARTHA LEE

WE HAVE been testing margarines the last few weeks in the Martha Lee Kitchen and have been very pleased with the results.

What a change there is from the old inferior types that were sold on the market some years ago!

Packaged and branded, and even dated, to assure the housewife of freshness and wholesomeness, this shortening makes a very good substitute for butter, which is rising daily in price.

What is margarine, anyway? It is a shortening that is made from meat and vegetable fats. It may be pork or beef, cotton seed, coconut, peanut or corn oils. These fats are churned with pasteurized milk and combined with salt, and can be used with great success for all the cooking purposes for which butter is used —cakes, pies and some types of frying.

MOUNT VERNON PRIDE

1 cup margarine
2 cups granulated sugar
4 eggs
3 cups pastry flour
3 tsps. baking powder
¼ tsp. salt
1 cup milk
2 tsps. flavoring

Cream the shortening and sugar. Add beaten egg yolks. Sift flour, measure, and sift dry ingredients and sift three times. Add dry and liquid ingredients alternately to the sugar mixture. Fold in the beaten egg whites. Pour into three well-greased tins. Bake in a moderate (375 deg. F.) until done—20 to 25 minutes. Cool. Spread Cherry Filling between the layers. Frost entire cake with Mount Vernon Pride Uncooked Frosting.

CHERRY FILLING

1 cup granulated sugar
1½ tbsps. cornstarch
1 cup cherry juice
½ tsp. lemon juice
¾ cup cherries, drained Red vegetable coloring

Combine the sugar, cornstarch, juice, cherries, and the desired amount of red coloring—cook over slow flame until thick. Cool and spread between layers of cake.

IRISH MAT KING BEATS LUTZE

Displays Marked Improvement in Match

By Jack Conway

Dan O'Mahoney, Irish heavyweight wrestling champion, scored his most brilliant mat victory when he conquered the colorful Nick Lutze before a capacity crowd of 18,000 persons at the Garden.

The 22-year old Irish sensation took a page from Lutze's own book when he pinned the Californian for the first fall in 18m. with a reverse body lift and upright crotch. The reverse body lift has been Nick's favorite weapon in his fiery attacks.

O'Mahoney blazed his way to new glory when he won the second fall in six minutes with his famous "Irish whip."

Danno had punished Lutze with a hammerlock. He held Nick helpless for five minutes and then cut loose with his spectacular "Irish whip."

Danno continues to show improvement with each bout. He is rapidly mastering American wrestling styles.

LIKE JOHN L.

O'Mahoney's great strength enables him to break away from bad holds. The youngster is tireless and is able to maintain a gruelling pace.

Lutze was in the best condition of his career. He looked like a Greek god as he entered the ring.

Nick weighed 197 pounds, which is heavier than he has been for any of his previous major bouts. The youthful Danno scaled 217 pounds. It was all fighting bone and muscle.

Danno was once more the darling of the crowd. While Lutze was well received by the huge gathering, most of the cheers were for O'Mahoney.

When Danno paraded to the ring wearing a green bathrobe with the word "Ireland" on the back, he was greeted like a conquering hero.

It reminded old-timers of the receptions that were accorded to John L. Sullivan when the latter was in his prime.

Lutze tried the ear hold on O'Mahoney in the early stages of the contest. This hold is barred in Europe, and it was the first time any of Danno's opponents have used it on him.

Nick punished the conne Irishman severely, but O'Mahoney's tremendous strength enabled him to break loose.

O'Mahoney employed a body scissors to weaken Lutze. He clamped his huge legs around Nick's stomach and applied tremendous pressure. This line of attack slowed Lutze down.

Danno also used arm locks with good results.

NICK HURT

Lutze made his bid for a victory with his famous double arm lock and reverse back fall. He crashed the Irish champion to the mat but before he could pin him, Danno lifted himself up with a bridge.

He came out of the hold to score with a reverse body lift and upright crotch. The crowd went frantic when O'Mahoney pinned Lutze for the first fall in 18m.

Lutze was crushed by the pain that was with such violent force that the back of his head and his neck were injured. His second defeat by him first aid before they permitted him to leave the ring.

Back on the mat O'Mahoney came out of a headlock to score with a hammerlock. Danno applied great pressure, and made Nick suffer considerably.

Lutze got loose after being crashed to the canvas, but O'Mahoney pounced on him, resumed the operations of the "Irish Whip" and counted with the winning fall in 6m.

ERNIE BEATEN

Gino Garibaldi, Italian heavyweight, scored a victory over Ernie Dusek of Omaha in the semifinal. Garibaldi pinned his mat rival in 20m. 11s. with a top body grapevine and body press.

The big fellows set a terrific pace. Both crashed through the ropes on numerous occasions.

During one of the wild mixups Garibaldi and Dusek clashed head on in the center of the ring. Both were knocked to the canvas, and it was a minute before either was able to get up.

Garibaldi was the first to resume wrestling. Dusek pulled himself to the ropes and took the benefit of a short count from Referee Charley Donnell.

"Ball" Martin of Trenton and John Malmberg of Worcester were even at the end of 20m. of wrestling. The tussle between Scotty McDougal of New York and John Sheliman of Providence also ended with honors even at the end of 10m.

CUBS Vs. REDS

PUSIE MAGNET AT ARENA

By Bill Grimes

Fighting with as much spirit as though they were trailing instead of leading the Canadian - American League by five games, Bruin Cubs will tear into Rhode Island Reds tonight at the Boston Arena from the opening face off.

It will be the tenth Cub-Red game of the season. In nine starts the Cubs have won six and tied three and, naturally, are anxious to continue their sensational success against such a worthy opponent as Providence.

Although Jerry Shannon and Jack Shill have departed from the Jayvees, Milt Halliday, who has been on loan to Syracuse, has been recalled.

The great Jean Baptiste Pusie will be the honoree of all eyes. Pusie has played his best hockey against the Reds.

Although he is by nature a most peaceful type, Pusie has a couple of pet hates in George Nichols and Andy Mulligan, who cause him to go berserk at the slightest provocation.

Of late, Le Pusie has been seeing consistently for the Cubs. He caused the red light to flash three times against New Haven and has been coming up with a point a game for more than a fortnight.

O'Doul Signs As Pilot Of Seals

San Francisco, Feb. 16 (U.S.-INS) Frank O'Doul, better known as "Lefty," and no friend of opposing pitchers, came back home today from the major leagues—as manager of the San Francisco Seals, with whom he broke into the Pacific Coast League 18 years ago.

The New York Giants profited $100 under the deal, and O'Doul sacrificed his claim to the custom-ary bonus that goes to a 10-year man in the major leagues when he signs with a minor league club.

Olive-skinned Nick Lutze, down and out, a victim of the "Irish whip." Dr. Sumner Fraser and the seconds of the Coast Adonis gaze in awe at the opponent's corner, after inspecting the wrecked Lutze, as though they had spotted some frightful two-headed monster. Sure and it was only Dan O'Mahoney who has convinced wrestling fans that he's something of a superman, at that.

Newton, Melrose Win School Ice Tilts

JOE GARDELLA, ARLINGTON, SUFFERS EYE INJURY

One casualty marked the schoolboy hockey games at the Boston Arena this afternoon, Joe Gardella, center ice on Arlington's second line, being slashed over the right eye, the gaping wound requiring two stitches to heal.

Gardella's injury, coming at the start of the game with Stoneham, was unfortunate in more than one way, for it was his last game of the year. He goes on the ineligible list next week and will be unavailable in the future.

Melrose met stubborn opposition in Medford and only won out 3-2 in the closing moments of the third period on a pass from Foster to Deeoste which broke the existing tie.

Medford got away to a goal in the first 12 seconds of play against Melrose with Stanley poking in the puck on a pass from Muse. But the lead was shortlived, Foster, who made all the Melrose assists, passing to Deeoste to tie the count two minutes later.

406 ATHLETES COMPETE AT GARDEN

By Walter Kiley

A track and field carnival, sponsored for the fourth year by the University Club, will be staged at the Boston Garden tonight.

Competition will be in two divisions, A and B.

There will be more than 406 entries from 22 New England colleges.

Bates, Boston College, Bowdoin, Brown, Harvard, Holy Cross, Maine, Technology, New Hampshire and Yale compete in the first division; Amherst, Boston University, Colby, Conn. State, Mass. State, Middlebury, Rhode Island, Springfield, Tufts, Williams and Worcester Tech in the second.

The hurdles loom as particularly attractive with Harvard due to carry off most of the A honors. Milton Green, winner of both the Prout and B. A. A. hurdles, is again a standout, although he should receive a severe test from Phil Good of Bowdoin, Dick Hayes and Carrol Layman, Harvard teammates.

Eddie Calvin, making his first appearance for Harvard in the 1935 dash field, must step fast to head Harry Kellar of Bates, Earl Hill of Maine, Tommy Gilligan and Walter Janiak of Holy Cross and Bill Soule of Bowdoin.

Maine is expected to cut into the points to startling degree in the 880 and mile events. Maine won the 2-mile intercollegiate relay races at both Prout and Unicorn games.

The University Club has selected its relay pairs tomarrow.

Holy Cross, which will represent New England in the national championships at New York next Saturday night, will meet Northeastern University in the feature event.

Baxter Mile Tonight

New York, Feb. 16—New York Athletic Club's 68th indoor track and field meet at the Madison Square Garden this evening is expected to attract a record attendance of 16,000.

New Hurdle Mark for Larson

Dana Larson of Hyde Park high, walked through all opposition in the Boston District finals yesterday afternoon on the East Armory track and captured the 50-yard low hurdles in the new record time of 6 2-5 seconds.

Larson grabbed the lead going over the first hurdle and coasted to the tape, beating A. Kadeis of Brighton by two yards. Kadeis finished in front of J. Harris of Hyde Park and E. Hogan of Brighton.

In the class "B" W. Donovan had a hard battle in edging his field to gain a victory. G. Mendum of East Boston slipped into second position and T. O'Brien of Hyde Park in third.

J. Mardet of Jamaica Plain breasted the tape just in advance of E. Koelch in the class "C" with R. Bronstein of Brighton in the third hole. Mardet's time was 7 1-5 seconds, the equal of Donovan's in winning the class "B."

R. O'Neil of Brighton was the winner of the midget class after a spirited contest. Y. McGrane, East Boston, took second honors and F. Cronin of Hyde Park third.

CHARLIE O'ROURKE DAN O'MAHONEY ANNA BURKE

A steaming dish of corned beef and cabbage, Dan O'Mahoney sits down to a delayed dinner with two of his Cambridge cousins, little Charlie O'Rourke and Miss Anna Burke, after toppling Nick Lutze in two falls in 24 minutes. Maybe this is the real reason Danno wastes no time in winning his mat bouts.

AUSTEN LAKE on Strange Interlude of an Irish Wrestler

THE VILLAGE SCHOOLMASTER'S LETTER was postmarked Dreenlomane, Ballydehob and "fresh come by Irish post." said Dan O'Mahoney, from his home parish and township. It was a faithful-hearted message, filled with the vernal freshness of one who lives close to the land, and written in a scholarly, painstaking script.

Austen Lake

Danno, the wrestler, dreamed as I read aloud.

"Your father brought us down a new lot of papers last Sunday and the Mrs. and myself had a scrambie for them by the fire. There is no doubt of it, you did wonderful, lad? . . .

The hawthorne hedges would be high and flourishing soon, with the red haws of winter dropping off. Clothes would be drying on the hedge rows, and the canvas covers would soon be stripped from the haycocks.

Inside the end house on the lane, the schoolmaster is reading by oil light beside the hearthstone where peat burns under a black supper-kettle. There are chairs with seats of hayrope and a heavy tick of the wall clock.

* * *

The Schoolmaster's Mrs.

"Do you remember the day when the Mrs. painted you a picture of New York in words? Well, you have had some experience since, short as the time is . . ."

The comforting clatter of earthenware, the warm scent of new baking and the moist fragrance of fresh butter. The sound of a fiddle being played in the neighboring shop where they sold sugar sticks.

The cheery voice of the aproned housewife, with a strain of sad misgiving. (You'll be making your way alone now, Danno.)

"Your father is very lonesome. He came down to me several days at the school. If y'll came home now the lads would set fire to the town with tar barrels . . ."

Gray old man in shiny woolens and hat of tobacco brown. Heavy, weather-bent hands that held an ash-stick between his knees with as many wiggles in the stave as a serpent has coils and a head as long as a goose's beak.

The years had bowed his bigness, but his hazel eyes are clear, with a trick of looking a little beyond you as though an image over your shoulder. ('Tis a broad, far road you'll be traveling, lad.)

* * *

Dusek's Puphood

"I was talking to Patsy Cotter at the rail station, and he was reading an account of the fight one day in Ballydehob to about 20 of the lads. Patsy said Crotty, the R. M., passed and almost fell out of the car when he heard the ap plause of the lads . . . Patsy says Crotty must think they were proclaiming a republic . . ."

Furze and broom grow by the station and a black bird is singing from an ivy-covered wall. Patsy, the student, blowing Gaelic in a soft lisp from his russet cheeks, while elders stamp their brannigans and nod.

The girls who pass with shawls over their heads and nudge each other over silly secrets. Michael Duffy's ass-cart piled high with cabbages for the Dublin market and the limping man who goes beside it.

"I got papers from Tom Driscoll in Salem. He was there and gave his own description of the match. Wasn't Dusek's brother a terrible pup—not much of a sport . . ."

Dear, trustful friend, bred to a holy regard for fair play. Scholar of texts but unlettered in American dollar methods. A lad must bend his body to meet the wind. (They'll be teaching you new tricks, but there's no makeshift for honor, b'y.)

"I read a letter from Pat Mahoney's sister to your father. In case you ever go to New York you must look up a son of my Uncle Dan's if you have time. I think his name is Douglas Driscoll. Dan's mother would be your grand-aunt, so you can see the relationship."

Stone canyons and the headlong rush of American traffic. Air soiled with gasoline fumes. Reaching hands and autographs.

Seas of ringside faces through the red plush ropes. Servants to pick up the clutter. Hotel rooms in silver and cream. (You'll be comin' back changed, Danno.)

* * *

Fair Day Reveries

"We took Katy up to see Paddy before Xmas & we also went to see him. He is better than when I saw him before, the same nice lad he always was.

"We gave him a little Xmas present, and you should see how delighted he was—he's a regular innocent kid yet. The nuns are delighted with him and call him the gossoon of the house . . ."

The rolling fields where buttercups, clover, foxglove and meadowsweet bloom in season, crossed by the limstone roads of County Cork.

Cork's Fair Green on a day of sunlight, hounds barking, foals nickering, cattle lowing, dealers bawling their wares, rooks cawing in the yews and the trick-of-the-loop men yelping their patter. Green apples are pyramided on stalls, over which old women keep guard against urchin pilferers.

"Squireens" in whipcords and high stockings wander in the yellow sunlight. Colored carts with long, red shafts and blue middle boards. And pretty penny pastries. (You'll be wantin' for bigger sights, but simple things are best.)

"I will now wind up with best wishes from Mrs. & myself & wishing you success and sincerely hoping that all your contests will be victories. Your cousin, J. Barry."

Cork's quiet hillsides in the afterglow. Rush rooves anove window-framed lamplight. The croak of the mallard, the neighing of the jacksnipe and the dismal booming of the bittern.

The end house in the lane where the schoolmaster's tame jackdaw perches on the halfdoor. The clear warmth of the gulf breezes.

"I'll be goin' home by summer sure," said Dan O'Mahoney, in his lilt of the Kerry pipes. There was a trace of wistful mist in the boy's heather blue eye.

"For sure," he added softly.

Mr. Boston Foreign Boxers Here March 14

—By Jack Conway—

OUR NOBLE promoters of amateur boxing have confirmed my exclusive story of three weeks ago that they are going to stage an international show at the Garden on March 14.

George Freeman of the Irish American A. A. of South Boston has come to bat with the official announcement.

Mr. Boston

"We shall feature a team of Irish boxers," said Freeman. "I also expect to close for a team of English glove wielders. The foreign boxers will oppose an All-American team.

"Our only regret is that we haven't got larger quarters. The public is as much interested in boxing as ever when you give them the right kind of attractions."

The St. Joseph's T. A. Society for a time was in the field for the international show, but has withdrawn in favor of the Irish-American A. A.

The latter organization was the only local club, with the exception of the B. A. A., to carry on in the amateur boxing field during the depression.

* * *

Tom Kanaly announces that the B. A. A. will stage another open amateur boxing show on next Wednesday night. A large list of entries has been received, and plenty of keen competition is assured.

* * *

The Falcon A. C. of Lawrence is also back in the amateur boxing field, and has staged some attractive shows this winter.

* * *

Dan O'Mahoney will leave for New York tomorrow. He will make his debut in the New York Garden on Monday night when he will oppose Ray Steele at a show to be promoted by Jack Curley.

* * *

LEWIS' VICTORY

Strangler Lewis furnished another wrestling upset when he defeated Jim Browning in St. Louis. Just when the experts are beginning to count the old Strangler out he has a habit of coming through with a surprising victory.

* * *

Dempsey told me during his visit to this city that he still considers Lewis the best of the wrestlers. Dempsey and Lewis were pals back in the days when each was a sports king.

* * *

Johnny Morrissey has done a splendid job in organizing the athletic activities of the Lynn Park Department. I attended the recent dinner of the playground division of the Lynn Park Department in the company of the brilliant Austen Lake and Dan O'Mahoney.

* * *

JAKE ZERAMBY is teaching boxing at the Lynn playgrounds. He is one of the best featherweights in the history of New England boxing. At the age of 21 he licked Andrew Routis, world featherweight champion, at the Boston Garden. He didn't get the title as it was an overweight match.

* * *

Johnny Morrissey has developed a flock of ball players who have made good in league baseball.

* * *

I met Blondy Ryan at the Lynn dinner. Blondy says he will have a good season at shortstop for the Phillies. Ryan is a flashy fielder. If he can pick up a bit in his batting, he will be of great value to the Phillies.

* * *

There was a sprinkling of ladies at the Lynn affair. The new interest of the ladies in athletics has increased attendance figures, and also resulted in many girls competing in various branches of athletics.

* * *

RANDOM SHOTS

We'll be rooting for the Bruins when they go into action against St. Louis on the latter's rink tonight . . . The Bruins displayed marvelous form against Toronto, and look as if they are headed for big things in the hockey world . . . The comeback of Eddie Shore has been responsible for the splendid showing of the Bruins in their recent games . . . He is playing better hockey than he has at any time during the past three years.

You will get a close-up of a first class college basketball team when Columbia clashes with Harvard at Cambridge tonight . . . The relay races at the University Club's games at the Garden tonight are expected to furnish keen competition . . . The crowd at the O'Mahoney-Lutze wrestling bout at the Garden proved that the Irish champion is the greatest sports attraction now showing in New England . . . He has revived interest in wrestling . . . O'Mahoney has a first cousin, Dennis Driscoll of Nahant, who is a U. S. customs inspector.

The Braves hop off for the sunny South next Friday . . . Signs of spring . . . The Sox leave for Florida the following week . . . Phil Troy will have charge of the Red Sox party . . .

MAREVE GETS CALL

WILSON'S BEST IN DISTANCE TEST

MASTER LAD

WELL PLACED IN FOURTH RACE ON MONDAY

By Dave Wilson

BEST BET—MAREVE

Hialeah Park, Miami, Fla., Feb. 16—Mareve, R. Allen's breadwinner, shapes up as decidedly the best of an indifferent lot of cheap platers in the one mile and a furlong of the seventh race here on Monday afternoon.

Golden Lyre, Sandy Beach, Naughty

cJ. E. Widener entry.
dHowe Stable and M. Lowenstein entry.

El Bandido, Justa Jane, Lucky Turn

SECOND RACE—$1000, claiming, three-year-olds and up, maiden, seven furlongs:

11 El Bandido	106	Corbett	2-1
15 Justa Jane	101	Haines	2-1
4 Lucky Turn	x92	G. Watson	4-1
7 Sock Dologer	102	Litzenberger	8-1
1 Shot Gun	x101	Lynch	6-1
18 Slave	x97	Lindbergh	8-1
10 Chicle Ship	97	Hanford	10-1
9 Aifatrix	x94	G. Watson	10-1
14 Footwork	106	Winters	10-1
16 McCracken	106	Wholley	10-1
17 Panocha	107	Stout	10-1
12 Night Ray	101	Meade	15-1
3 Birkar Man	102	S. Renick	20-1
2 Napanee Jack	102	Merritt	20-1
5 Playoff	x97	J. Renick	20-1
6 Daffy	101	Bryson	20-1
8 Velantries	x99	Lindberg	20-1
13 Delano	113	McDermott	12-1

EL BANDIDO is dropping 12 pounds off his clever third to Night Serge. A smooth ride would just about clinch honors. JUSTA JANE, the main danger, is away down on the also eligible list and may not get a chance to start.

Free Trade, Langorous, Air Line

THIRD RACE—$1000, claiming, three-year-olds, one mile:

7 Free Trade	x100	Peden	8-1
5 Langurous	106	Arcaro	4-1
2 Air Line	x104	Lynch	4-1
3 Shalot	108	Haines	4-1
11 Happy Find	x99	Rainey	6-1
8 Masked Q'en	110	Litzenberger	8-1
1 Little Argo	105	Wright	10-1
13 Kuvito	x103	Bryson	15-1
12 Grasswrack	111	W. Garner	15-1
9 Gay Crest	101	Meade	15-1
4 Conchita	x98	G. Watson	10-1
6 Good Cheer	103	J. Renick	20-1
10 Penrill	103	S. Renick	20-1

FREE TRADE was a bangup fourth behind Race Craft last time out. With a bit of improvement, he could handle a field of this sort. LANGOROUS is dropping down and figures to be very dangerous. AIR LINE for the remainder.

Master Lad, Fake, Bounding Count

1 Master Lad	115	Schaffer	1-1
4 Fake	103	Haines	8-1
13 B'ding Count	x110	Lynch	6-1
9 Mickeys Man	x110	Rainey	4-1
11 Fair Countess	x95	Hanford	8-1
5 Scotch Queen	x98	G. Watson	10-1
10 Maddening	x101	Bryson	10-1
12 Canimar	105	Litzenberger	15-1
8 Arakay	112	Maschek	15-1
7 Bill Bleiweiss	x106	Rainey	15-1
6 Semi'ole Queen	103	Corbett	15-1
3 Goldfin	103	S. Renick	15-1
2 Joe Mac	108	Merritt	15-1

Col. Greene, Twoaday, Show Boy

4 Col. Greene	x110	Bryson	3-1
7 Twoaday	x95	G. Watson	5-1
2 Show Boy	115	Critchfield	5-1
1 Chewawa	103	Haines	5-1
3 Blessed Again	103	Meade	8-1
8 Lulu Lite	100	Lindberg	8-1
6 Miss Elegance	103	O'Malley	15-1
5 Penalong	108	Haines	20-1

COL. GREENE shapes up as the class in this number. Just a question of the Polymelian colt running to top form. TWOADAY is dropping 13 pounds off his second to SHOW BOY and figures next best. The latter should head the others.

Flowery, Marcasite, Four Spot.

3 Flowery	106	Meade	4-1
9 Marcasite	105	Merritt	8-1
6 Four Spot	x106	Rainey	6-1
4 Luculent	x101	Bryson	4-1
2 Protagonist	x103	C. W. Smith	6-1
1 Flaxen	x103	Dupre	8-1
10 Lady Macaw	x98	G. Watson	8-1
5 Just Buck	x105	Hanford	15-1
8 Musing	105	Malley	20-1
7 Star Bud	x106	Peden	20-1

This is a mighty tough spot to go looking for a winner. I'm calling the finish FLOWERY, MARCASITE and FOUR SPOT and letting it go at that.

Mareve, Potion, Vested Power.

SEVENTH RACE—$800, claiming, four-year-olds and up, one mile and one-eighth:

3 Mareve	105	Litzenberger	2-1
4 Potion	113	Wright	3-1
5 Vested Power	110	Arcaro	8-1
10 Flat Rock	x107	Lynch	8-1
9 Sun Teatime	x105	C. W. Smith	6-1
1 Kibitzer	110	Meade	8-1
8 Darkling	108	Madeley	10-1
7 Tuffy G.	x107	Rainey	10-1
6 Dancing Boy	110	R. Watson	15-1
2 Guiding Light	x98	Lindberg	15-1

MAREVE shapes up as the most probable winner on the card. If anything upsets my dope and hands him a drubbing it will likely be POTION. The latter closed a world of ground after breaking slowly last time out. VESTED POWER is the "wakeup horse."

MALDEN Five Plays Y. M. H. A

WESTFIELD AT W. E. HOUSE

By Bob Ahearn

Malden City club at Boston Y. M. H. A., and Westfield Whips over at the West End House, are the choice tidbits for followers of local semi-pro and amateur basketball teams this evening.

The Seaver Street court of the Y. M. H. A. should boast one of the largest crowds in years, when the City Club quintet lines up with the home club.

Several weeks ago the Malden team were returned the victors over Johnny Fox' boys and a lively battle is in prospect tonight.

With an undefeated record to their credit, the Westfield Whips furnish the attraction at the West End House. The Jayvees engage the Rust Craft Five in a preliminary tilt.

Eben D. Jordan Memorial gym, Charlestown, will be the scene of standout encounter. Boys' Club of Boston stacks up against the highly touted Essex Aggies. In a prelim, the Boys' Club Reserves meet the Boys' Club of Lawrence.

Forty games are listed for the Boston Park League in the 10 municipal gyms. Some hectic engagements should result with teams fighting for play-off berths in the various divisions scheduled to play.

Natick K. of C. play host to the Boston Trojans in an exhibition game tonight at the Natick Junior High court.

Hearst Fund Papers Lease New York Parks

By International News Service

New York, Feb. 16—The New York American and the New York Journal's Christmas fund and the free milk fund for babies, of which Mrs. William Randolph Hearst is chairman, today leased the ball parks of the New York Giants and the New York Yankees for the purpose of staging at least two big fights and one post-season college football game for charity this winter.

It is understood that the charity funds will get 10 per cent of the gross after which the ball parks will get 10 per cent for rental.

The two funds have deserted Madison Square Garden which insisted on a 15 per cent rental for the use of its Long Island bowl.

It is probable that Barney Ross and Jimmy McLarnin will be the principals in the first fight staged for the Milk Fund.

Max Baer is under contract to make his first defense of his title for Madison Square Garden but, when he fulfills that contract he probably will make his second fight under Milk Fund auspices.

3 CUBS Avoid Cut BY SIGNING

Chicago, Feb. 16 (AP)—Evidently worried over Owner Phil K. Wrigley's ultimatum to sign up before Monday or take another cut in pay, three Cub players have signed contracts within 24 hours, reducing the holdout ranks to three.

Outfielder Chuck Klein and Infielder Woody English signed yesterday. Today, Owner Wrigley received a wire from Bill Lee, young pitcher, that he had signed his contract and placed it in the mails.

St. Stephens, away forwardly and displaying excellent speed, drew out rounding the turn under slight restraint. He saved ground entering the stretch, and responding gamely under pressure, held back Black Target safe at the finish. Black Target, prominent the entire trip, closed menacingly when straightened into the stretch. He tried to savage the winner in the final drive and would not fully extend himself. Rebel Yell, strongly urged from the start, improved his position steadily on the outside and finished with a rush through the stretch.

SECOND RACE—Purse $1000. Allowances for 3-year-olds, one mile. Post 3:00, off 3:02½, start good, won driving, place same. Time—1:38 1-5. Winner—Beaver Dam, b. or br. g. (3) by Nocturnal-Beguine by Light Brigade. Trainer—G. Gould.

Beaver Dam lightly restrained and going wide in early running, responded courageously when called upon and wearing the leaders down through the stretch, won going away under extreme pressure. How's Chances well up all the way, finished gamely through the stretch but was unable to overhaul the winner. Hardware in tight quarters in the run down the back stretch, took command on the stretch turn but was again forced into close quarters when Boston Brook bore in. He continued gamely, however, outlasted Cristate.

THIRD RACE—"The Nursery Stable No. 1," purse $2000 added, for two-year-olds, three furlongs. Post—3:32, off 3:37½. Start good, won easily, place driving. Time—34 2-5. Winner, Deliberator, b. c. (2) by Wise Counsellor-Azurita, by Hessian. Trainer—S. W. Ward.

Deliberator, whipped in the first fifty yards, drew out in the opening sixteenth mile. He was taken out to the center of the track then steadied in front held away throughout to win with speed in reserve. Lemont, away forwardly, moved up stoutly in the run out of the chute but swerved toward the inner rail but was in the clear and always held the others safe. Prosy, a forward factor throughout, faltered in the stretch and was being hard driven at the finish.

The beacons are for the protection of pedestrians, being used as a traffic signal stop light. Enraged motorists are shooting out these beacons, claiming they slow up traffic too much.

Campbell to Retire After Setting New Speed Record

Fear for Life of Racer as Goal Is Set at 335 M. P. H.

By DAVIS J. WALSH

Daytona Beach, Feb. 16—Alarm for the safety of Sir Malcolm Campbell began to be felt today in this incredibly unreal community where wind and tide and weather are something very well calculated to halt one conversation and start another.

Sir Malcolm Campbell is the unreal almost fragile Englishman who sits behind 28 feet of destruction and guides it to its destiny at a pace so fantastic that one gropes vaguely for reality and almost doubts the watch.

He did 272.108 miles an hour here two years ago for a world record with the chassis of this same car.

Now, with this new and improved Bluebird, he confidently expects 300—or better—and he can't wait.

That's what has everybody praying for rain this morning when he is to go for an announced run down the beach for purposes of experimentation, an exhibition run that might result in a new record, by mistake.

Campbell, frankly, can't restrain himself when the gas pedal is calling for more and the time clocks are set.

He'd run over a Tom Thumb golf course, if he suddenly realized the Bluebird was under his foot and really ready to go.

MAY STOP IT

Privately, I understand, he feels that the car, given perfect conditions, can do at least 335 miles an hour.

Privately, too, local officialdom is seriously concerned; so much so, in fact, that it may refuse to set up the timing traps if conditions are not to its fancy—or, at lease, until they're certain that a life is not to be sacrificed to no intelligent purpose.

They still recall the tragedies of Lee Bible and Frank Lockhart who wound up on this same beach in a pile of quivering and pulsating disaster so complete that it was simpler to identify the machinery, instead of the victims.

"No more argument," shouted Campbell the other day when they were telling him that the beach wasn't right for his first trial.

The funny thing was that not even his car was right. They had to take it completely apart and mend more than half of the integral parts before he could logically venture out on this treacherous stretch of sand again.

FEAR FOR LIFE

I think I can tell it now that Campbell is generally understood to be committed to retirement in case he makes a new record this time.

I think he ought to be. He's 50 and, by all means, not the man he was three or four years ago.

Fifty, I may say experimentally, is the age of mature judgment—and, contrarily, impatience.

Instinctively and to cover up physical "slippage," we demand faster action. Some may call it nerves. I call it age.

Anyhow, it all wound up this way:

Campbell maintained the beach was all right. The officials said it never was worse.

More than that, if it didn't get any better, they promised to pull the plugs on the timing traps today, provided the mad Englishman started on a gallivant down the beach.

SOX LEARN WHO IS BOSS

CRONIN Bars GOLF

PLAYERS MUST LIVE AT HOTEL

By Joe Cashman

Young men who take Red Sox money to play baseball will do that little thing and nothing much else, if Manager-Shortstop Joe Cronin has his way.

Golf is taboo once the race begins. The Fenway favorites may carry their link tools South but must forget them for six months, starting April 16.

Wives may go to camp, even though Pilot Joe won't take his bride along, but there'll be no living in apartments by the hired hands.

All must reside under the roof of the Sarasota Terrace, where the boy boss can keep his eagle eye on their comings, goings and doings. Last spring almost half of the squad hired furnished flats.

They may have obeyed the rules as faithfully as those who stayed at the hotel but there was no way to check on them.

While he hasn't said anything about it, Cronin no doubt, also will order his men to arise at a fairly early hour and, like all managegs, set a reasonable retiring time.

Bill McKechnie will allow his athletes to live where they wish and come and go and do about as they please in off hours, providing they don't abuse the privilege.

It once was just the other way around.

Heinie Wagner, "Shono" Collins and Marty McManus had few rules and restrictions when they directed the Sox, while McKechnie ruled with an iron hand in those days.

The Warriors had to hop out of the hay before 8 a. m. They were kept at the ball park from 10 in the morning until late afternoon, which left them little time for golf. They couldn't play cards for money.

Last spring, though, the rising order and card ban were rescinded.

Players due to participate in exhibition games were excused from morning work. Golf, fishing or swimming met with no managerial objection.

McKechnie softened because he had learned his charges could stand more freedom without going haywire.

STILL LEADING MERRY RACE AGAINST MAN WITH SCYTHE

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

"It's all in living right and drinking plenty of milk," chuckles Rabbit Maranville as he does his first running since breaking his leg in an exhibition game last spring in the Southland. He does several fast laps daily in a Rochester gym decked out in uniform. Maranville thinks he'll be as good as ever when he reports a week from Sunday to Bill McKechnie at St. Pete.

PIN QUEENS MEET IN 10-STRING TILT

Norwood

SITE OF MATCH, CARDED FOR WEDNESDAY

By Ed Cogswell

Out in Norwood the women are all agog over the ten-string bowling match between their local champion, Emma Kelly, and the Boston star, Florence Anderson, which will be decided next Wednesday evening at the Norwood Recreation alleys.

Joe Bonigli, manager of Miss Kelly, says he already has received requests for invitation tickets from several hundred women bowling fans.

Florence (Bobby) Anderson is considered by many the champion woman bowler of New England. Her record in a tournament is 377 for three strings, 115, 105 and 157.

Bobby Anderson

Miss Kelly has greatly improved this season. Each week she bowls in the Norwood Women's League, and her individual average is 96 3-45.

Kelly's high string in league bowling is 145, while she has rolled 347 for three strings. She is cool under fire, which will be a big help to her in her match with Anderson.

Callahan's went into a tie for third place in the Roxbury Businessmen's League at the Eagle alleys when they took three points from Van Borden, 1536 to 1506. Harrison did the big end of the work, a 351.

On the other hand, Heidgren of Nordens did all in his power to ward off defeat by dusting 357 maples into the pits, his opening string being 132. Lion's 335, Burns' 332, Driscoll's 325 and Wagner's 323 were the tops in the league.

GRAFT In Relief FEARED

HEMPHILL SEES GRAVE DANGER

By ROB'T. H. HEMPHILL

Mr. Vincent Dailey, New York state manager for the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, in his address to the City Club of New York, admitted that the 1200 employes of his organization were all Democrats.

He denied, however, that partisan politics governed their distribution of funds.

One of the strongest undercurrent arguments against the President's five thousand million dollar public works relief program, committing the disposal of this vast sum to his personal direction, is the fear that his subordinates may use these funds principally TO STRENGTHEN PARTY LINES AGAINST THE NEXT ELECTION.

Five thousand millions is an enormous sum of money. Enormous potential power. No man in history has ever had more than a small fraction of such a tremendous sum at his personal disposal.

The organization to handle it must necessarily be of such proportions that the President can have only slight acquaintance with the highlights of the program for its distribution.

What could be accomplished with such tremendous power in the unrestrained hands of one man, or a small compact group with imperialistic delusions, is too serious a subject to contemplate without a shudder.

Gumplowitz says:

"There is no fact in social science more firmly established than that any group, once given broad powers, eventually abuses them."

Persistent reports of undisguised partisan handling by governmental financial agencies unquestionably furnishes a basis for the reluctance of some of our most thoughtful congressmen and senators to subscribe to the unqualified blanket authority on which the administration insists.

On the other hand, odorous pork barrel appropriations of the past furnish little assurance that detailed distribution by Congress would result in much more satisfactory performance.

In every direction, every argument is against involving the country in any avoidable undertaking requiring disbursement of substantial sums by political agencies.

To assume that the unquestioned personal integrity of one man is sufficient safeguard against the political chicanery, intrigue, graft and favoritism of an extensive political organization, is simply to admit ignorance of what is charitably known as "practical politics."

The further we depart from the original concept of our social compact, that "the nation which is least governed is best governed" the more evidence we develop that the conception of a nation regimented and directed by some central agency is but a mad dream which fatuously omits consideration of the human element as it is.

NEW NRA Message on MONDAY

ROOSEVELT TO ASK EXTENSION

By Associated Press

Washington, Feb. 16—President Roosevelt intends to send his recommendations for the new NRA to Congress on Monday.

His message is expected to propose a one-year extension of the National Recovery Administration with authority to make it two years if deemed advisable.

Mr. Roosevelt definitely has decided to seek permanency for some of the fundamental principles of the emergency NRA which expires next June.

In this group are the provisions for abolition of child labor, the right of labor to bargain collectively and the maintenance of minimum wages.

Mr. Roosevelt kept his calling list comparatively free today to work on his recommendations.

As word of the NRA message came from the White House a Senate judiciary subcommittee assembled to investigate charges of "monopoly" under NRA.

This meeting and another proposal for an inquiry before the Senate finance committee forecast an harassed journey through Congress for any new NRA legislation.

"SOUL" Church of Christ SUBJECT

"Soul" is the subject of the lesson-sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow.

The Golden Text is: "Set your heart and your soul to seek the Lord your God" (I Chronicles 22:19).

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible:

"Preserve me, O God: for in thee do I put my trust . . . Thou wilt show me the path of life: in thy presence is fulness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore" (Psalms 16:1, 11).

According to the police, the three had been drinking and engaged in a row in Ames street.

Death Knell of Ice Coaches Sounded by Connie Smythe

By Bill Grimes

"Say, if what my players tell me about Frank Patrick is true, I knew considerable more than the hockey public gave me credit for knowing when I elected to be a manager instead of a coach," declared Connie Smythe recently.

"During the two days they lay over in Toronto, the Boston players confided in my Leafs that Frank Patrick is the most unusual manager ever connected with the N. H. L." Smythe went on.

"Patrick has not climbed up on a dressing room soap box this season . . . He usually enters the dressing room sucking on a cigarette . . . 'There's a great crowd out there tonight . . . I'd like to win this one.' That's all he says.

Frank Patrick

"If he can keep the Bruins up in the race without resorting to any more oratory than that, I'd hate to be one of these alleged coaches.

"Just as soon as I am able to convince myself that my players are not taking me for a ride, I'll get rid of our coach and assign Tim Daly to open the gate at relief time.

"Patrick may not be a showman but he knows his hockey and his players . . . Although I've known him for years, I never had the pleasure of watching him handle an N. H. L. club until this season . . . He is a Sphinx on the bench. Other than to lean across and announce his substitutions, he never moves during a game.

"But he knows what's going on and, because of his coolness, his players are always completely relaxed and going at top form . . . To my way of thinking, the Bruins are not as formidable as a year ago, but they are fighting for first place with the end of the season about one month away.

Connie Smythe

EAGLES May Name 2 COACHES

Two coaches will be needed by Boston College if Coach Joe McKenney leaves his post to become assistant physical director of the Boston public schools.

Dinny McNamara, present backfield coach and chief scout, seems most likely to get the call to succeed McKenney, and Harry Downes, present coach at Reading High, has been mentioned for the line coaching post. That leaves the backfield and scouting duties open.

Paddy Creeden may get the call.

What are YOU?

What is this thing we call the human spirit? What is personality?

Is it a chemical reaction? A physical phenomenon? Are you the result of your glands—the sum total of your flesh, hair, toenails, teeth, blood and bone? Or is the real YOU something much bigger and better—and less perishable?

Long years ago some wise men conceived a curious theory concerning you. They decided that you are much larger than you think you are.

You think of yourself as inhabiting a certain body, living in a certain place, bearing a certain name, having certain responsibilities, relationships, thoughts and emotions. That you believe is your life.

Elsie Robinson

But these wise men believed that your life and your spirit went much further than that. That, they said, was merely your CONSCIOUS SELF. Actually only the core of yourself.

Your real self stretched far beyond your body—was aware of things which lay entirely outside the comprehension of your body.

Often you know that someone has come into the room. You haven't seen them come. You didn't hear them. Then how do you know they are there?

Through that wider self which stretches ghost-like but keenly alive outside the body, the wise men decided.

A Wide Self

A strange and fascinating theory. Is it true? Nobody knows. But this much is certainly true. We CAN, if we wish, have a wider existence than that which is confined within our personal experiences. We can have as wide a Self as we wish to build.

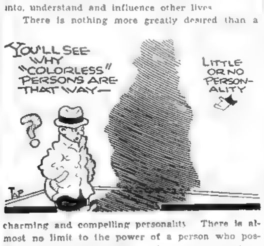
We are not born with our characters—we accumulate and create them. We build character or personality as we build a house or a business—bit by bit . . . using contacts, experiences, impressions—instead of bricks and steel, stocks, bonds and material assets.

What kind of experiences? Any and EVERY kind.

The wider the rungs of your contacts and experiences, the more elastic and colorful your personality and the greater your popularity.

For the more you know of life, through your own ups-and-downs, the more you'll be able to enter into, understand and influence other lives.

There is nothing more greatly desired than a charming and compelling personality. There is almost no limit to the power of a person who possesses such a personality. And the person without personality suffers endless humiliation and bitter resentment.



"Colorless" People

Yet if you'll study "colorless" persons you'll soon see why they are that way.

Their lives are lack-luster and limited because they are too cowardly or conceited to accept those challenges and criticisms which would mature them and make their lives dramatic.

They can't stand rebuffs, losses, disappointments and shocks which inevitably come to those who live abundantly.

And so they huddle within the safety and comfort of their petty prejudices, their tiresome mannerisms—and then wonder why others are not drawn to share their stale isolation.

We like those who enlarge our lives—we seek out those who add color and flavor to existence. That is the secret of popularity.

But you can't give color unless you have accumulated it yourself. You can't enlarge the other fellow's life until you've had the courage to enlarge your own.

You'd like to be popular? Nothing's holding you—except yourself. If you want popularity, the makings are all around you. But can you will you, take them?

FARM Doctor Defies LANGONE

WELCOMES ANY PROBE, HE SAYS

Bridgewater, Feb. 16—Dr. William T. Hanson, medical officer in charge of the hospital for the criminal insane here said today he would welcome an investigation into conditions at the State farm.

Senator Joseph A. Langone of Boston hurled the threat of investigation yesterday when he charged that six persons had been murdered at the institution.

Three persons have been slain at the farm, Dr. Hanson said, but two of them were guards.

Dr. Hanson said:

"Two of three persons murdered were guards slain by four inmates who had attempted to escape. The other victim was a little girl killed with a hammer by her father.

Beating Protest

"The death of William Register recently was due to pneumonia, an autopsy by the medical examiner immediately after death disclosed. But he had been beaten.

"I objected strongly to the action of three hospital employes and recommended to Superintendent Warren that all three be discharged.

"I felt that with three of them there, Register could have been subdued without resort to such force.

"After he had received the beating, I found that Register had suffered a broken jaw and a laceration near the mouth. He had apparently been struck by fists.

"My recommendation that the men be discharged has not been carried out.

"It may be that Mr. Warren has taken into consideration that one of the men involved is the father of seven children and has decided to allow them to remain after a warning.

"There are no differences between Superintendent Warren and me. I am certain that I have no thought of resigning and I don't believe that Superintendent Warren has.

"It has been my policy to treat the unfortunates confined here with kindness. Occasionally some inmates become violent, but it is my opinion that beatings are unnecessary."

Eviction War Grows In South Boston

Plan Drive

At a tightly packed mass meeting in Dahlgren Hall, Silver and D streets, it was voted to shower the White House with postcards to instruct local House representatives of the popular sentiment and to finance a staff of lawyers for representation at the hearing in Federal Court March 12.

"This sort of thing could start a revolution just as it has in other places."

Thomas N[illegible] and a former state representative, brought neighbors from East Boston, all of whom praised the South Boston contingent for its stand.

N[illegible] declared the federal authorities had been unusually secretive in their housing plans because they knew there would be a roar of protests from the people who naturally protect their homes and their businesses."

An oration in Lithuanian was given by Stanley Michaelson, editor of a foreign language newspaper. Other speakers included Michael Venis of South Boston and Michael G. Rines of Dorchester, representing the Massachusetts Real Estate Owners Association.

A "home defense fund" was instituted at the meeting which was to be made available for immediate legal work.

McKnight Balks at Jail Shift

"You have completed your House of Correction term, with 72 days off for good behavior," said McElroy.

McKnight replied:

"I have certain constitutional rights. I was sent here for a two-year term. That has not expired. I refuse to accept time off for good behavior."

McElroy told him to put it in writing. District Attorney Bishop will be asked Monday to rule on the problem.

McKnight has a long term yet to serve in state prison but is hoping to be saved by the Supreme court. His request for a stay of sentence to prison pending the high court's final decision, was denied this morning by Judge Walter L. Collins. This denial required McKnight to face the question of whether he can be forced to take time off for good behavior.

O. O. McINTYRE
NEW YORK
Day By Day

New York, Feb. 16—It is 4 o'clock of a droopy afternoon and a column that should have been finished hours ago is no further along than this.

And there's the long night [illegible] to stare into space wondering if the seizure is temporary or permanent.

The nightmare that clouds the [illegible] of every writer is that [illegible]. Am I written out?

But morning paints the [illegible] rainbow. And he is likely [illegible] into [illegible] column and [illegible] it out before [illegible].

O. O. McIntyre

Somewhere there is analogy between such individual despair and the mass gloom of a troubled world. One morning we awaken and it is gone.

Many of us are solaced in such paucity by a story told about Eugene Field.

He had come to a full stop with his column in the Chicago days and was floored.

Finally in that cut-glass handwriting he sent this [illegible] the managing editor: "I give up. There'll be no column tomorrow."

As he was slipping into his coat for Jake's around the corner, a reply came: "There's a printer downstairs whose three children are dangerously ill with scarlet fever. He's not giving up."

Fine Writings

The most exquisite writings flower from the depths. Heywood Broun has not written a more [illegible] essay than the one that followed within a few hours the passing of his former wife, Ruth Hale.

The Richard Watson Gilders back-in-the-yard chalet was once a cosy refuge and still later the Oliver Herfords Sunday afternoons aureated a long-remembered charm. Everybody who was anybody [illegible] and stayed late.

Nearest to the salon is Louis Bromfield's room in that hotel. The glossiest of the sophisticates have been gathering there. But Bromfield is soon returning to France.

A Dash Pox

I have a dash pox breaking out in a rash now and then that scatters one here, one there and two [illegible].

Blumenthal hopped out and saw [illegible] limousine occupant was a [illegible] strikingly beautiful lady. He craved her pardon and inquired, "Is it presumptuous to ask where one may purchase a car like yours?"

She broke into a merry laugh. "It is not," she said. "My husband is the head salesman. Come inside and meet him." Blumenthal did and [illegible].

DI MARCO Faces Quiz on $17,000 THEFT

Lowell, Feb. 16—Police said that they would question Mario Di Marco on Monday at state's prison in connection with the $17,000 looting of an armored bank car here last summer.

Di Marco was returned to state's prison yesterday to await ruling on a possible violation of his parole following his alleged admission to Boston police that he was present at the Cosmos Club murder of Joseph P. Sweeney.

In the robbery which took place here on Aug. 10, three bandits masquerading as guards made away with two mill payrolls totaling nearly $17,000. The holdup took place while the bank car was parked in front of the Union Old Lowell National Bank.

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

A Horrible Moment When the Flame of Life Flickered Only Feebly

By FLOYD GIBBONS

FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

You know, boys and girls, we have had yarns in this column from just about every corner of the globe. We have had stories from Europe, Asia, Africa, Australia, North and South America and the Island Archipelagoes of the Pacific. Some of those yarns have had strange and exotic settings. They have been laid in every conceivable spot from a mining camp in the mountains of Mexico to an old, tumbled-down medieval castle in Ireland.

But setting is not adventure. Adventure is where you find it. It can come to you in the subway as well as in the jungles of Borneo—it will find you on your own doorsteps as easily as in the forbidden city of Lhassa or among the crumbling ruins of Angkor Vat. I have a yarn here today of an experience that has happened to thousands of you. It didn't occur in Bechuanaland, or in Kabul, or in the Haute Atlas.

It happened in the town of Little Ferry, N. J. It is not the story of a battle with black tribesmen, or Afghans, or Berbers. It's just the story of a bunch of birds like you and me, and there's no battle in it at all. It is the tale of an incident such as might have happened to you some time or other—such as is happening almost every day to people all over the country. And it is adventure? Boy, oh, boy!

And here is the yarn, boys and girls, sent in by William Becker, of 5½ Washington place, East Rutherford, N. J. It starts out on a hot June night a few years ago, with Bill and three friends of his, Bob, George and Herman, all young lads in their early twenties, deciding that it would be a good night for a swim.

Well, sir, there are lots of places around Little Ferry, N. J., where you can get a good swim if you want it badly enough. These lads knew a pond out by the brickyard where the water was cool and not too crowded. They piled into Bob's car, turned into the brickyard road and in a few minutes they were there.

There were seven or eight fellows there ahead of them. The four lads changed into their bathing suits and Bob and Bill dived into the water. George and Herman didn't follow them. The water was deep on that side of the pond and George and Herman couldn't swim. They walked around to the other side where there was a sandy beach and shallow water and started wading toward the deeper water at the center.

Bill and Bob had a great time swimming. They forgot all about Herman and George. After a while Bill got tired of the water and went up on the beach to lie down. It was a clear, quiet evening. Lulled by the rustling of the wind in the trees and the lapping of the water on the edges of the pond, Bill had almost dropped off to sleep when the drowsy silence was broken by a sudden commotion out in the water. Leaping to his feet he peered out in the direction from which the sound had come and saw a sight that made the breath catch in his throat.

Through the evening dusk he could just make out the figures. Bob and George were struggling in the water over at the deep side of the pond. For a moment they wrestled and thrashed about on the surface, then they both went under. Then Bob came to the surface again and began swimming in circles around the spot where George had gone down.

Half asleep though he was, it didn't take Bill long to guess what had happened. George, who couldn't swim, had gotten out beyond his depth. Bob had gone out to save him, and George, becoming panicky, had fought him off. Bill didn't wait for any more to happen. He dived into the water and swam out to help Bob.

Bob had gone under again, looking for George, when Bill got there. Bill followed suit. Both of them dived time after time without any luck. They were getting tired now—losing hope. The thought popped into Bill's mind that George wouldn't be going swimming with them any more. Then, as he dived for the last time, he bumped into something that moved. It was George.

Bill reached out to catch hold of him. At the same time he felt George's arms tightening around his waist. George had a death grip on him now, locking him in an unbreakable embrace, clinging to him with the blind, insane persistence of a man who is frenzied beyond all reason. He was going down now—dragging Bill down with him.

For a moment Bill was terrified to that same blind panic that already had George in its grip. He wondered if this was going to be his end—wondered if Bob on the beach or anywhere else about up there above would discover his plight in time to save him. Only a few seconds more now—a minute at the most—would kill the two.

But Bill wasn't going to waste that minute waiting for something to happen. He started trying to shake off the death grip that George had fastened on him. Instead, he let go of George altogether—began kicking his feet and arms, his arms—swimming as well as he could manage toward the side of the pool. If he could get over there—if he could get his shoulders out—he could stand up, get his head out from under the water—that was the big gulp of air that meant the difference between life and death.

It was hard. Worse! It was torture. His body ached and his lungs felt as if they were going to burst. He didn't think he'd be able to hold the air in them much longer. Then suddenly he felt solid ground beneath his feet. The bottom!

He gave a few more kicks, got his feet under him and stood up. His head popped out into the air. He was safe.

Bob came running up. [illegible] Together they pulled George out onto the sand. He was pretty far gone, but artificial respiration brought him around. In a little while he was in good enough shape to be taken home. And as for Bill—well, he felt as if he'd had enough of the water for one night. He went home, too.

That, boys and girls, is the story of the biggest thrill in Bill Becker's life and he didn't have to go to China or India or the Antarctic to get it. He got it right at home in a place where almost everybody else gets their thrills. Monday we introduce Leo Donahue of 19 High street, Lynn. He tells of finding his life staked as 'The Killers' Pawn' in a game of greed and slaughter.

Los Angeles, Feb. 16—I don't know that the story of Nelson Eddy has a moral unless it's a boost for Patience. Young Mr. Eddy came here with a gorgeous singing voice but for a year Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer thought his personality wasn't suitable for the screen. He sat around doing nothing.

Harding Film at State

By HARRIS MORGAN

The cool, calm beauty of Ann Harding lends itself to "Biography of a Bachelor Girl," on the screen at Loew's State.

Fortunately the pristine Miss Harding has Robert Montgomery as her somewhat reluctant partner in amour. For in the role that the sleek and sophisticated Ina Claire created for the Theater Guild in the smart comedy then more succinctly titled Biography, Miss Harding's charms are oddly out of place.

On the same bill is May Robson, delightfully at home and as grand as ever as the factory owner in "Mills of the Gods," a dramatic piece with the depression, strike riots and wealthy wastrels complicating the social problem. Fay Wray, Victor Jory and Raymond Walburn head the supporting cast.

Keith Review

Comedy With Music

Berle Star

Snappy Show All Through

By GEORGE HOLLAND

A youthful composite of five or six fine entertainers, Milton Berle, whose classic proboscis would find my money riding squarely on its ample proportions in event that a Comedians' Handicap is arranged for this year or next, bubbled, sang, danced, acted and did tricks all over the stage of Keith's Memorial Theater, yesterday.

Berle, in a brace of words, is great. So is the very New Yorkish 75 minutes of revue from the "Casino de Paree"—fresh from the "Casino de Paree" (via Pittsburgh) and heading straight back to Broadway for a spasm at the Capitol Theater.

Being somewhat hoopla or whoops about the multifaceted Mr. Berle can [addressing friends?] be ceased being interested many months ago in where he gets his material. His critics have been tagging him for being modern. Mr. Berle, it has been alleged, scorned the use of a Joe Miller joke-book.

Instead, he appropriated, they said, the jokes of his rival comedians, a way, you will admit, of being up-to-date. Well, if it is true, and it isn't wholly true, I don't care.

Occasionally, Mr. Berle, who is not an Irishman, recalls the lamented Jack Donahue. When he smiles. When he imitates Eddie Cantor, he is Eddie Cantor, and when he imitates Harry Richman he has everything but Richman's profile. The kid wins an audience in ten seconds, and he is the instinctive showman to such an extent that his grip is not released.

Cardini, the tops of his kind, is uncanny in his manipulation of cards and cigarettes. The "suave deceiver" works with gloved hands. Chilton and Thomas, with their trade-marked form of kick-dancing, and Barbara Allison, with a bell-like voice and beauty, are standing parts of "Casino de Paree." Six of the world's fattest women work with six Lilliputians in an unusual comedy number, which the audience enjoyed.

A gorgeous two-dozen of girls, drilled in real routines, are the ornaments to this gem of a show. The picture is "Stingaree" with Honeymoon," and Edna May Oliver and James Gleason have the leads. You won't be bored at all.

Gala Bill

Venita Gould, for many seasons now one of the most skillful and talented of impersonators, heads the new stage show, contributing her novel impressions to a well-rounded and excellent bill.

In "David Copperfield," perfect casting and a superb production have brought the beloved Dickens characters to life. Just as you may have imagined, David is little Freddie Bartholomew, the manly fellow whose childhood provided Dickens with some of his most fascinating pages.

Ching Ling Foo, Jr., and her Chinese wonder workers, Masters and Gauthier, and Bernice Stone and the Perry Twins are other headliners on the Orpheum stage presentation.

Screen Hits at Scollay

Turning from its vaudeville policy, the Scollay Square offers a double feature screen program for the week, with "Charlie Chan in Paris," and "The Gilded Lily" sharing film honors.

The indomitable sleuth, Charlie Chan, first made famous in the stories of the late Earl Derr Biggers, is once more portrayed by Warner Oland. This time the rotund gentleman with the all-seeing eye and the pungent philosophy is involved in mysterious happenings in Paris, with assorted murders, innumerable suspects and untold patience required for the working out of the clever plot.

Thomas Beck, a personable newcomer on the Fox lot, and Mary Brian, lend the romance to the thrilling tale, and Charlie wends his wise way through danger and difficulties, rounding up the gang of forgers and killers and playing Cupid to the harried young lovers.

Claudette Colbert is the star of "The Gilded Lily," a new and entertaining version of the old Cinderella tale. Claudette this time is a hard-working stenographer, who through the efforts of a young newspaper man who loves her, becomes front page news.

With dukes and diamonds in the palm of her hand, the lovely lady of masculine hearts chooses popcorn on a bench in Bryant Park as her lot in life. The dialogue is brisk and jolly. Miss Colbert wears some fetching gowns, and Fred McMurray, Ray Milland and C. Aubrey Smith are the men in her life.

Ford Discusses War

John Ford, Bible lecturer and evangelist, will deliver a lecture at 8 p. m. Sunday in Symphony Hall. He will discuss the imminence of another European war.

Radio Stars Plan For the Future

By N. F. T.

Few folks stop to consider who the broadcasting stars of tomorrow will be. Perhaps even fewer care a lot. However, it is interesting and a fact that no institution, sports and theatricals included, devotes more time, money and effort than the radio realm for the development of talent to serve during days and nights without end that calendars will surely unfold.

One of the training camps, or proving grounds, is the weekly "Radio City Party" presentation, coming down the coast-to-coast waves (WBZ) between 9 and 9:30 this evening. Such budding "make" celebrities as Go-Go De Lys, now with Phil Baker; Peg La Centra, promising contralto personality; Barry McKinley, gifted tenor; Johnny Hauser, another likely vocal comer, and Cynthia Knight, out of the stage entertainer ranks, will hold forth in the "Stars of the Future" room at now current. It is an up-and-up, on the level endeavor, worthy of well wishes.

* * *

HISTORICAL HIGHLIGHT

That regular "rural sketches" re-enactment (WNAC) is based on the Washington's Birthday observance theme and labeled "Valley Forge" appropriately. Meaning tonight at 7 o'clock.

* * *

An impressive musical salute to Cole Porter the composer, will occupy "Roxy" and his network gang (WNAC) from 8 till 8:45 this evening. Pieces written by Porter will naturally predominate.

* * *

Eight followers may wish to lend an ear too while Jack Dempsey does a bit of discoursing on his pet subject (WEEI) tonight at 6:15 p. m. They have an interview ready and waiting for the Manassa Mauler to undergo. No doubt all about the 48 knockouts to his credit previous to passing his punch crown along to the Shakespearean scholar, Gene Tunney.

Best Bets Tonight

6:30 p. m.—WAAB—Jack Fisher and his orchestra, with songs by Bette Brooks.

7:00 p. m.—WAAB—"The Street Singer" presents 15 minutes of songs.

8:00 p. m.—WBZ—Phil Cook's Show Shop, a half-hour program of entertainment.

8:15 p. m.—WAAB—"Getting the News While the Public Sleeps," by Francis P. "Tip" O'Neill.

Radio Questions, Answers

Q—Is Grace Moore signed for a definite number of weeks? Is her program highly regarded among listeners? We think it fine.
E. H. C., of Cambridge.

A—Yes, Miss Moore has six or eight more turns to take, with her contract quite likely to be renewed, although one can never tell about sponsors. Her fan following is extensive, glad you also

Q—What makes the sound of raging fire on the air?
Sound Sleuth, of Somerville.

A—Usually it's the crackling of cellophane.

Q—Did Tony Wons ever lead an orchestra in his early days? We seem to recall him in that capacity [illegible] Philadelphia why many years ago.
H. G. F. of Charlestown.

A—Not that is known, since Tony is a native of Wisconsin and his real name is said to be Sen-o-w, which is Wons reversed, although Tony will not deny or affirm the rearrangement of his name.

Q—Is Clair Moore known as "The Fat"? And that feature which changes after tomorrow, but he will continue. He acts in a number of dramas as Ida voice fills the bill.
Carl and Dean, both use Rhymester?
J. B. of Roxbury.

A—They call Carl by both titles you mention. The last question is one you will have to take up with the boys themselves; we don't believe.

Q—Does Ned Weaver act in the program "Club Romance" on Sunday night with Lou Bennett and Conrad Thibault? On what other program is he heard?
R. D., of Brookline.

A—That's him in the role of "Ted" [illegible] that feature which changes after tomorrow, but he will continue. He acts in a number of dramas as Ida voice fills the bill.

WALL ST. Seeks APPROVAL OF Plans

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

The loving attitude of Wall Street toward the Securities and Exchange Commission is for all the world like something out of mythology.

Thus it is there is much blinking of eyes as New York Stock Exchange officials hie themselves down to Washington to ask please will their new idea of including office partners on the governing committee be all right. Mr. Joseph P. Kennedy of Boston, and top man on the commission, seems to think it will be. And this is said to be only a beginning. Mr. Richard Whitney is expected to seek Washington approval for even further liberalizing of the world's largest stock exchange, of which he is president.

As serious students of banking trends dip deeper into the proposed changes in existing laws they become more and more convinced their adoption would include all the features of banking as practiced in communistic and fascist states. One learned member of a business school faculty in Boston told his students that only Russia and Italy had anything that would compare with the final result if proponents of the new bill have their way. In this legislative matter we earnestly hope Congress will move slowly and surely.

Notebook: When denial of ideas expressed in writing has been particularly widespread there is added zest in thumbing the records . . . Thus we glean more than crumbs of comfort in reading over statements in this column last fall to the effect the Central Bank issue was of utmost importance . . . For it is now generally agreed that is all the changes in the Federal Reserve now sought mean . . . Passage of the banking bill will mark the inauguration of a period of major credit expansion.

James R. Bancroft, president of the American Institute of Finance, does not view the rail situation as a one-sided affair. He feels that bearish factors do not completely submerge the outlook for rail shares in gloomy depths. He turns the bear arguments on the bears by pointing out general regulation may be of material help in increasing rail tarffic, while it is unlikely the government will abandon the rails after having extended liberal assistance, and finally states some increase in freight rates is a logical expectation.

* * *

Shorts: In support of cheerful ideas of rail shares along comes an editorial excerpt from Railway Age stating the latest increase in carloadings was relatively the largest since improvement began . . . American Can after sliding off in ana lmost casual manner from the 117-118 level lost little time in finding its footing and rushing to an even higher level . . . The rumor of a pleasant surprise for stockholders will not down . . . It was in circulation as long as last October.

The bulletin also reports four changes due to mergers and consolidations, three changes in title and six discontinued banking offices.

Foreign Trade Is Surveyed

New York, Feb. 16. Cables and wireless dispatches to Business Week give the following survey of business abroad for the week:

London (cable)—London is slowly working out of nearly three weeks of commodity market excitement which has resulted already in the failure of four old and well-known firms. While the affair may not yet be cleaned up completely, it seems evident now that London bankers have come to the rescue of the remaining firms which have been affected and that business soon will return to normal.

Scarcely had the Strauss Co. admitted inability to meet its obligations because of speculation in peanuts when the crisis in white pepper was revealed. England by Garabed Bishirgian, who is a director of James & Shakespeare, that firm was the first to admit bankruptcy. Later J. F. Adair & Co. and Rolls & Son, who had acted as brokers, also were forced to the wall. Total losses are estimated at about $12,000,000.

Politics are almost as disturbing a factor. Antagonism to MacDonald is mounting. The Tory revolt hasn't sufficient following to win an election, and the present mood of the masses being what it is, it seems unlikely that a national government no longer has much chance for general support. Added to the widespread resentment over the recent innovation in the unemployment insurance payments and coverage, the recent gambling scandals on the commodity markets have aroused public anger and done much to revive interest in the state control of banking and investment, both labor planks.

Paris

Paris (wireless)—While the internal situation has not changed much, it certainly has not improved. Unemployment is growing slowly. There are a few strikes, most serious just now in the steel industry, which is reducing payrolls. Farmers are unhappy over the low prices they are getting for their wheat since the government withdrew its support, and are not likely to offer the Flandin government much whole-hearted support.

Considerable business interest has been stirred by the plan to fly all mails in France. The new company will be called the Blue Air Co. There is special significance in this.

In Paris, and in half a dozen other large cities in France, there are pneumatic postal systems. Any post office in any of these cities will sell small blue forms on which a brief message can be written. They fold into post card size and are addressed on the outside. These are mailed at the post office, are at once slipped into small cylindrical metal tubes which are shot through pneumatic tubes to the post office nearest the address of delivery. From there a boy delivers the message. Altogether the dispatch should not require more than two hours for delivery. (New York uses a pneumatic tube system between post office branches, but sells no special message service other than the regular "special delivery.")

Berlin

Berlin (wireless)—Business is seasonally slower in Germany this month. This, with the slowing down of governmental expenditure on public works, accounts for the increase in the number of unemployed during January by 370,000.

Short-term financing of the government's relief program is reaching the saturation point and the capital market has not yet improved sufficiently to permit large-scale refinancing on a voluntary basis. Financial authorities in Berlin are of the opinion that a compulsory loan is the only alternative to some form of inflation.

Pitts. Screw & Bolt

Pittsburgh Screw & Bolt Co. preliminary statement for year ended Dec. 31, 1934, shows net profit of $203,147 after taxes, depreciation, interest, etc., equal to 14 cents a share on 1,434,553 shares, against net loss of $143,700 in 1933.

Net Loss Reported

Middlesex & Boston Street Railway Co. reports for the December quarter net loss of $11,226, against loss of $13,427 a year ago. For the full year 1934 net profit was $7768, against profit of $4771 in 1933.

STOCKS Mixed Near CLOSE

FRESH SELLING IN UTILITIES

New York, Feb. 16—Evening up for the week-end and a continuation of the persistent weakness in the utilities brought an irregular close to the stock market today after selective strength at the start.

Consolidated Gas sold at a record low in the utilities. U. G. I., American Water Works and Public Service of New Jersey were driven to the lowest levels in years. American Telephone was heavy.

Sugars were buoyant, with American Sugar up more than a point. Auto accessories also were in demand. Crosley Radio was a strong specialty.

Standard issues like the steels and rails sagged in light dealings. American Can hit a new high since 1931 and then lost its gain.

Proposal

In the stock exchange proposal to the securities and exchange commission to enlarge its governing board and make office partners of exchange firms eligible as governors, observers saw indications of a possible compromise on other such recommendations which have been sharply disputed within exchange circles.

Market analysis turned attention once more to the difficulties in London which arose from the disastrous speculations in pepper and shellac. The fact that the situation has come before the House of Commons has tended to emphasize the gravity of the affair.

Union demands for a minimum annual wage presented to the Fisher Body Corp. were interpreted in some quarters as a possible hint of a test of strength preparatory to a general campaign within the industry.

Air Reduction

1934 EARNINGS IMPROVE

The two companies operated by Air Reduction Company's management, Air Reduction itself and U. S. Industrial Alcohol Corporation, will show improved earnings for 1934. Air Reduction owns a large interest in alcohol, although the amount has never been stated.

Total earnings of U. S. Alcohol last year are estimated at $4 to $4.50 a share for its 391,033 shares of capital stock which would compare with net earnings of $1,392,962, or $3.56 a share in 1933.

In view of these earnings it is probable directors will give some consideration to placing the stock on a conservative dividend basis during the first half of this year if business continues on an even keel.

Air Reduction will probably report net for 1934 of approximately $5 a share for its 841,289 shares of capital stock. This will be the best year's profit with the exception of 1929 and 1930.

Net income in nine months ended Sept. 30, 1934, was $3,077,199, equal to $3.66 a share, and results in the final quarter usually one of the most profitable, are expected to bring the final showing up to the estimated level. Business in January ran ahead of a year ago.

ARMOUR & CO.

Dividends Paid

Armour & Company declared regular quarterly dividends of $1.50 on the $6 prior preferred stock of the Illinois company and of $1.75 on the guaranteed preferred of the Delaware company, both payable April 1 to stock of record March 10.

Directors extended from March 10 to April 1 the time in which stockholders of the 7 per cent preferred stock of Armour & Co. of Illinois can exchange their holdings for new prior preferred and common stock.

Bond Market

PRICE TREND IS LOWER

Following general advances of Friday, the bond market was moderately active this morning and prices in many instances were inclined to sag. There were, however, no important losses.

Some of the U. S. Treasury and Home Loan obligations were slightly lower. In the foreign group, German Young loan 5½s improved on reports that a one-year extension of the "stand still" agreement covering Germany's short term debts had been arranged at a reduction of ½ of 1 per cent in the interest rate.

In the rail list, Atchison general 4s, which hit a new record high of 110⅝ Friday eased to 110. Erie general 4s and Northern Pacific refunding and improvement 6s, 2047, made fractional gains as did also Southern Railway general 4s.

National Defense Against Foreign Invasion of America's Domestic Market

It is the only means of protecting the home market and thereby MAINTAINING THE AMERICAN STANDARD OF LIVING.

Free trade is an importer's and NOT a PRODUCER'S nor a MANUFACTURER'S policy.

It is a policy which would provide the MINIMUM OF WORK for American workers.

* * *

WHEN a finished article is imported all the labor is foreign labor and in most instances all the material is foreign material.

An American purchaser of a foreign article is paying the wages of the foreigners who made it and paying Americans only for its transportation.

There never was free trade in England. Always there were duties in one form or another. England came nearer to it than any other country, but she did not begin her form of it until she had built up a virtual monopoly of manufacturing under a protective policy which was not only fiscal but military.

She abandoned it when that monopoly was destroyed by the growth of manufacturing in other countries as fostered by a policy of protection.

But the American home market is the world's richest for other than strictly tariff reasons, though it could not have been developed without adequate tariff protection.

* * *

THERE is a sense in which it can be said that the United States was the first nation to discover a home market as something to be almost indefinitely enlarged by a higher standard of living and by higher wages, which is to say by enormously increased purchasing power.

It was something more than a home market to be protected by a tariff wall. That form of home market protection is as old as tariffs.

It was a market to be increased from within by the higher standard of living made possible by a more equitable distribution of the national wealth.

* * *

BUT as it grew and grew and prices became higher and higher it became more and more necessary to keep on increasing the tariff protection.

The higher our prices the easier for the foreigner to pay the tariff and still sell his cheap labor made goods in America.

And the greater the purchasing power of the American people the greater the eagerness of the foreigner to lower our protective barriers.

He could not do this by compulsion, but he hoped to do it by conferences and particularly by free-trade or low-tariff propaganda.

He flattered our college professors and fed them foreign text-books on political economy in which free trade was glorified as the only logical international policy.

There were plenty of good American text-books written with the authority of American experience, but their authors were scoffed at in European countries and compared unfavorably with the so-called master minds of the Manchester school of academic or, as they called them, "classical" economists.

THE FOREIGNER WANTS FREE ACCESS TO THE AMERICAN MARKET, AND HIS PROPAGANDA FOR THAT PURPOSE SHOWS CLEARLY THAT A HIGH PROTECTIVE TARIFF IS A NECESSARY PART OF AMERICAN NATIONAL DEFENSE.

* * *

DEFENSE WEEK is concerned with tariffs as well as with arms and armaments.

It is specially concerned with preparedness against the propaganda by which foreign-minded and foreign-inspired theorists would undermine the national protection of our tariff walls.

THOSE TARIFF WALLS ARE THE FIRST LINE OF OUR ECONOMIC DEFENSE.

Our Gambling Dives

Must Be Closed

"LET'S not stop with Boston . . ."

That is excellent advice bearing upon the present campaign against crime.

It is contained in a letter sent this newspaper by Mr. Guy M. Gray, Greenfield attorney.

Complimenting the Boston Evening American editorials, Mr. Gray adds:

"Governor Curley's recent drive against the betting dives is surely a timely thrust at the heart of a sinister vice. No doubt this Commonwealth is infested with hundreds of those betting emporiums. What a relief to thousands of families it would be if those places could be closed.

Mr. Gray is absolutely right.

There ARE hundreds of these places.

The police DO know about them.

It IS imperative that they be wiped out of existence EVERYWHERE.

Fortunately, the Governor and the State Police agree with Mr. Gray and the other decent citizens of Massachusetts.

Auto Owners Suffer

They Can Get Relief

THE Legislature has the duty to relieve auto owners suffering from unjust compulsory insurance.

Efforts to enact a flat rate in place of the pernicious zoning plan are reported opposed by the insurance companies and lower-rate zones.

As compulsory insurance was inaugurated with a highway safety pretext behind it, why not let the Legislature hear from Registrar Frank A. Goodwin.

As registrar several years ago, Mr. Goodwin did more to make the highways safe than any other one person. That's why his services were drafted by Governor Curley.

War on Communism

By American Legion

A distinguished visitor reminds us that this nation is beginning to find itself again, re-establishing and reasserting its independence.

National Commander Frank M. Belgrano, Jr., of the American Legion, tells the Massachusetts House of Representatives there is room in America for only one "ism."

Every post commander in New England will be enlisted in that war, he promises.

Better than that, with the development of a great national spirit now emerging from the ruins of somnolent complacency, every American will be enlisted in that war.

Lost Wool Trade

To Be Regained

Boston wool interests express conviction that the trade is to enjoy a vigorous recovery.

Two of the biggest steamship lines plying between Boston and Australia and New Zealand have agreed to establish free storage here at once.

The Boston Port Authority deserves credit for having brought about a change in the situation advantageous to our great wool trade center.

Champion Monkey-Wrench Thrower

Congress, with its supine willingness to set up more and more bureaucracies and to pile up more and more debts and taxes, has made itself the champion monkey-wrench-thrower-at-business of all time.

Senator Schall of Minnesota recently pointed to the current existence of FORTY-FOUR bureaucracies, topping numerous commissions and thousands of privately-drafted "laws."

200,000 "Political" Jobs Menace Merit System

By JAMES T. WILLIAMS, JR.

One cause which is calling for the assistance of the plain people of this country today, North, South, East and West, is the extension of the merit system in the Federal Government.

This system was fifty-two years old a month ago. Under this system nearly 500,000 employes of the Federal Government have entered the Federal Service.

But there are more than 200,000 Federal employes who have entered the Federal service without being subjected to any fair and thorough examination to determine their fitness to serve the public efficiently.

This vast group of Federal employes owe their position to the politicians. They look to the politicians to protect them in their positions and the politicians look to them for political support in payment for such protection.

MERIT SYSTEM

The question before Congress is whether the merit system should be extended throughout the Federal service. President after President has urged this extension in the public interest.

The merit system is a Democratic system because it provides competitive examinations which offer to the humblest citizen without any political support "a fair field and no favor" in his efforts to obtain a Federal appointment.

In taking this position he stands with his predecessors in the White House—nearly all of whom since the Civil War have urged the Federal service the protection which only appointments under the merit system can provide.

The Federal officials today which need most the protection of the merit system are:

AN EXAMPLE

Postmasters of the first, second and third classes; collectors of revenues, appraisers and marshals and the like.

Take the Postoffice Department for example: It ought to be administered as a business institution devoted to the service of the public.

Senator Norris of Nebraska is leading a movement in Congress to carry out the recommendations of Grover Cleveland and Theodore Roosevelt and the other Presidents, including Taft, Wilson and Coolidge, to extend the merit system to the Postoffice Department, as soon as feasible.

The bill of Senator Norris and similar measures for Civil Service reform will be considered by the Senate Committee on Civil Service.

Fortunately for the merit system, measures will be considered by a committee of which Senator Bulow of South Dakota is the able and patriotic chairman.

Bulow, United States Senator, Bulow, United States Senator, Washington, D. C., urging the extension of the merit system throughout the federal service, will greatly aid at this time in impressing Congress with the sincerity of the demand of the American people that the spoils system should be supplanted by the merit system throughout the Federal service.

Every American who writes such a letter will earn the honor of going to the aid of a great cause.

The Super-Salesman

By Winifred Black

A man said the queerest thing over the radio the other night.

We all laughed when we heard it. But somehow I can't get what the man said out of my mind, and whenever I really think of it, I don't feel in the least bit like laughing.

The man was some kind of a super salesman, and he was making a talk on salesmanship.

Winifred Black

"One thing, be sure to remember," said the man. "When you're going to see a prospective customer, remember how he dresses and be careful not to out-dress him. He won't like you if you do, and if he doesn't like you, he won't buy the most wonderful bargain in the world from you—

CATCH-PENNY THOUGHT

"And another thing. This is very important for country salesmen. Never go to see a prospective customer in a brand new car, especially if it's a good make.

"If the man has an old car himself, he'll like you all the better for having one like it.

"And if he has a new shiny car he'll feel sorry for you, and that will make him like you.

"Think how you'd feel about it if you were in his place. A little tired and maybe a little discouraged, and not so young as he used to be, and think how he'd feel to see a brisk lively young fellow sitting on top of the world coming to get an order from him.

"Never look more prosperous than the man you're trying to get for a customer."

Now what kind of a world does a man who'd say a thing like that and mean it live in?—I ask you.

Wouldn't you hate to live in it yourself?

No matter what they have, someone else always has something better and then they're perfectly miserable.

Long, long ago, a wise woman said to me:

Views on Japan

By Hendrik Van Loon

During the Great War a few of our more ardent patriots had a brilliant idea.

A knowledge of Spanish therefore became a sacred and patriotic duty. A knowledge of German indicated a secret liking for what the late Reverend Dr. Henry van Dyke so poetically called "the Potsdam gang."

As a result of their ignorance the enemy's language hundreds of boys, caught in shell-holes and advanced positions where they depended for their lives upon knowing what the fellow in the other shell-hole was saying or shouting, were killed.

They were sacrificed upon the altar of ignorance. But the old ladies who knitted were satisfied.

As a neutral observer, I am afraid that the Japanese are to blame for a great deal of this irritable feeling that is making itself felt in the press of both nations. Apparently Japan has a chip on its shoulder. Give us enough of such chips and we have a wonderful material for a nice, first-class blaze.

The only thing really Japanese I could find on the premises was a pair of Japanese sandals which the irrepressible Hattie Belle had brought back to me from Tokyo last year.

I therefore put them on and then I said to myself, "Now I am an average little Japanese of the year 1935, and why do I feel about the White Man the way I do? And why do I resent him so? Now let me think!"

"I first heard of the White Man (so ran my Japanese thoughts) in the early part of the 16th century. He came to my shores and I received him kindly. In return for my welcome he did his best to make my people turn against the established authorities.

"I started with a small and poor country. I worked harder than any white man ever worked to show myself the equal of the white man.

"I have helped him in his warfare. I have tried to establish law and order, but I am forced to go in by the servants' door whenever I visit my white friends.

"I tolerated this for years and years. Now my patience has come to an end. I shall either be treated as an equal or I intend to fight."

Stars and Stripes

In Salamanca, N. Y., there is a woman who refused to move for $75,000. She perhaps found it cheaper to pay rent.

Years ago, many bartenders were artists in this gaudy drink, into which they dexterously tossed the whole spectrum—iridescent strata of alluring color in the layers of variegated liquers.

Curiously the pousse cafe rode along in the wake of one of the first bold color waves which ever hit America, and the trail here leads to depression's convalescence therefrom and, all in all, much weightier matters than polychrome drinks.

DECREES OF STYLE

Silk lapels are to be polka-dotted instead of black. There are to be maroon, mulberry and wine-colored suits, faced with black containing color dots of the same shade as the suit.

Haberdashery and fabrics in general show a new outreach for color. Optional with certain suits will be a wide colored sash. This is interesting because about 1894, when we decided to make a grand sashay out of the depression, we did it with colored sashes.

That was the summer when young men blossomed with lovely pastel wrappings around the midriff, low-crowned, broad-brimmed straw hats, toothpick shoes and quite a dash of the aurora borealis in shirts and neckties.

I find data lacking as to whether boldness in the use of color, or the fear of it, has anything to do with such intangibles as public confidence and the larger social drifts and inclinations.

I am sure the professor would blank me on a paper advancing the theory that a new splash of color in the wind is returning prosperity. But there are some interesting angles here.

"During all these trying years there has, in general, been seemly and decorous behaviour among our citizens, and we have avoided unbecoming extremes in dress and entertainments.

"But there is now a disturbing tendency to frivolous display among both men and women. We can, perhaps, be indulgent with regard to the latter, as they are entitled to a somewhat wider latitude in these matters, but I see no reason for the flagrant disregard of good taste on the part of many of our substantial citizens.

"Only a fortnight ago I met a prominent banker in semi-country attire, wearing a stock of the most daring color pattern. Daily one sees waistcoats of shocking vulgarity in their challenge to all the canons of taste."

What interested me most about this was that it was just about then that they were making the last pull out of the seven years' depression.
